Canora, grand old lady of the B.C. coast, under tow by tug on way to new career

Canora Gets A New Job

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Canora, the oldest steamship on this coast, is coming out of mothballs to begin a new career as a floating sawmill and training centre for Indians in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The old Canadian National car ferry, built in Levis, Quebec, in 1918, left her berth at the Inner Harbor today and was towed to Vancouver by the tug Island Commander.

There she will be readied for her new assignment. After plying these waters for nearly 50 years she was pensioned off in 1968 and sold to local businessmen, Harold Elworthy and the late Morris Greene.

Her new owners are Goodwin Johnson (1960) Ltd. of Vancouver.

Company spokesman Art Ward said today that, in addition to the $76,500 paid for the oldtimer, an additional $150,000 will be spent on fitting out the Canora for her new role.

Ward, who has built and designed sawmills around the world, describes the Canora project as "unique."

Both the federal and provincial governments will participate in the training program.

His company and Industrial Development will outfit her so that she will be completely hydraulically equipped, electric power only being used to supply lighting in order to cut down corrosion from salt water.

"She will be complete in every sense of the word," Ward said, "and her hydraulic equipment will be quite unique."

When completed she will be taken to Naden harbor, near Masset in the Queen Charlottes.

"We will build a small Suez Canal there," Ward explained, "in which she will stay for three or four years before being moved to another location that we have in the islands."

Ward said training of the Indians will begin in Vancouver harbor during Canora's conversion.

"Gordon Kelly and other key workers will be brought down so that they can learn everything that goes into her," Ward said.

When Canora is in operation at Naden harbor, Ward said that, working in two shifts, 67 Indians will be employed aboard the floating sawmill.

NEWS BRIEFS

B.C. House Reviewed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Thursday the provincial government still has a lot of research to conduct before deciding whether to close British Columbia house in London.

Truman Still Fights

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Former president Harry Truman continues his battle against lung congestion and a weakened heart as doctors report increasingly inadequate functioning of his kidneys. His condition remained serious, one step away from the designation of critical, from which he was removed last Sunday.

Deputy Blamed

BATON ROUGE, La. (WP) — A special state commission of inquiry has concluded that a sheriff's deputy fired the single shot that killed two Southern University students in a confrontation last month.

Pound Stays Free

LONDON (AP) — Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, said today Britain will not repeg its floating pound sterling at a new fixed exchange rate before the country enters the European Common Market Jan. 1.

CALIFORNIA WATERS DARWIN'S THEORY

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California state board of education, rejecting pleas from scientists, has voted to downgrade Darwin's theory of evolution in new science texts for 3.3 million school children.

The board also left the door open Thursday to possible later rewriting of the texts to include the Bible-oriented doctrine of special creation beside the theory of evolution.

"May I say, without apology, that we Christians would like equal time," said board member Eugene Ragle.

The board ordered editorial changes stressing that Darwin's theory is speculative and not fact. That change will be required in basic science texts intended for children in kindergarten through Grade 8 before the state will buy the books.

Rocks Come First To This Moonman

Washington Post

HOUSTON — It was a clear example of Jack Schmitt, geologist, taking over from Jack Schmitt, astronaut.

He was being ordered to press on — to leave the rim of Van Serg crater "immediately if not sooner."

But Schmitt, the first professional geologist ever to explore the moon, had spotted some grey soil that he said "may be the youngest mantle that was ever thrown out of the craters."

"We can't leave this," he told Bob Parker at Mission Control Centre. "Bob, we've got to take five more minutes."

Mission Control isn't used to that kind of talk from astronauts on the moon; generally the word from the Manned Space Craft Centre here is law. Schmitt, indeed realized this; he commented to fellow lunar explorer Eugene Cernan that "Bob's mad at us."

The Apollo 17 astronauts flew from the moon Thursday, the last of 12 Apollo astronauts on the lunar surface and possibly the last men on the moon in this century.

Cernan and Schmitt rejoined their colleague Ronald Evans in lunar orbit just before 8 p.m. Thursday night when they docked the ascent stage of the landing craft Challenger with the command craft America.

The docking took place 60 miles above the moon's Apennine mountains and in full view of everybody at the Manned Spacecraft Centre, who saw it all from a television camera looking out one of the five windows of the command craft.

All three astronauts will spend the next two days in lunar orbit making 24 more revolutions of the moon while instruments inside an open bay at the rear of the command craft go on conducting experiments.

The reason for staying two days in lunar orbit rather than heading straight back to earth is to wring the most out of an orbital science instrument package.

Air Piracy Crackdown In 1973

OTTAWA (CPI) — The transport department is expected to introduce tougher security measures in Canadian airports in 1973.

But departmental spokesmen refused to be specific on security matters today in the wake of the hijacking of a Quebecair aircraft in Wabush, Labrador, Thursday.

They said they did not want to tip their hand to potential hijackers.

Larry Maxwell Stanford, 21, of Saint John, N.B., was charged early today with hijacking.

Four crew members were held hostage for 10½ hours by a man who boarded the plane in Wabush with a single-shot .22-calibre rifle. The 52 passengers and one stewardess left the plane during the first one-hour 15-minute stop at Montreal.

The hijacker, described by passengers as nervous, had said he would release the crew only after he had seen his father and a psychiatrist.

When he first boarded the plane in Wabush he said he wanted to go to Vancouver, but when told the aircraft would have to refuel at Montreal he agreed to the stop.

At Montreal the passengers and one stewardess were allowed to disembark and the plane was ordered to Ottawa.

As soon as the plane touched down at Ottawa, the man said he wanted to go back, then changed his mind again. After a 15-minute stop, he was persuaded by stewardess Josette Cote to return to Montreal and consult a psychiatrist, airport officials said.

Canadian airline pilots have been assured the government will tighten security with a new system sometime in the new year.

The government has reportedly told the pilots that the new system would involve a mixture of electronic and traditional checking methods.

A Canadian Airline Pilots Association spokesman said in a telephone interview from Montreal today the association is not satisfied with current methods.

Electronic methods are being used at major airports across Canada to check for weapons on passengers and in baggage.

Most airlines in Canada only use spot checks but CALPA would like checking applied to all passengers on all flights.

Jack Knowland, manager of the Victoria International Airport, says the predicted tougher security measures are part of the department's continuing program.

SNAKE SNACK SHOCKS MUM

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — An 18-month-old boy shocked his mother Thursday by eating a live and wriggling poisonous snake in front of her.

Mrs. Ronald Jess, said her son Paul ate the head and eight inches of the snake, identified as one of Western Australia's most venomous — a baby Dugite — before she could get to him.

"I found him with just the tail, still wriggling, in his mouth," she said. "When I snatched that from him and threw it on the ground he grabbed it to have another go."

"He didn't like it taken off him. It must have had a good flavor."

"I didn't have time to think — rushed him to the drug store first and rang the hospital. I had to tell them three times and spell out the word snake because they'd never heard of a child eating a live snake."

Mrs. Jess said the snake probably was not very venomous as it was only about 12 inches long.

Adults Dugites grow to a length of six feet.

Further Delay In Peace Hunt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Agreement on a Vietnam ceasefire seems headed for a further delay, possibly for weeks, while the White House tries to find the formula for an acceptable peace settlement.

President Nixon met twice Thursday with his chief foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, who returned late Wednesday night from Paris after 10 days of talks with Hanoi's principal negotiator, Le Duc Tho.

The White House maintained its refusal to comment on how the talks were progressing — or why they might be stalled — but occasional clues that emerged seemed to signify that much of the difficulty still lies with Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has been insisting that all North Vietnamese troops must leave the South before he will sign an agreement and that his country must be assured its sovereignty and integrity.

The Columbia Broadcasting System quoted President Nixon as telling friends Thursday that a fundamental issue still remained unsolved and that peace still seemed a long way off.

However, an official spokesman for the South Vietnamese government said today in Saigon that "basically our views on a peace agreement are identical to the views of the United States."

"We are not dissatisfied with our relations with the United States," he said.

"There may be differences on some small points but we are basically in agreement" on the status of peace negotiations.

Copter Saves Sailors

HALIFAX (CP) — All 18 crew members of the disabled West German ship Rumba were removed early today as the part-container vessel continued to wallow in heavy seas about 200 miles southeast of Cape Race, Nfld.

Among those rescued by helicopter was the mate of an assisting tug.

The spectacular rescue of the remaining 13 men aboard was performed in gale-force winds this morning by a Canadian Forces Labrador helicopter.

The men were lifted aboard by a motorized winch, one by one.

The 2,960-ton Rumba was reported in danger of capsizing this morning with eight 150-ton locomotives loose in her hold and another eight locomotives still secured on her deck as 27-foot seas and 50 mile-an-hour winds battered the vessel.

The vessels are about 250 miles south southwest of the Newfoundland capital.

BRIDE-TO-BE KILLED

BELFAST (CP) — A 19-year-old girl returning from mailing invitations to her wedding caught the full blast of a bomb that rocked a village in Northern Ireland Thursday night and died almost immediately.

Kathleen Dolan was to have been married Jan. 13.

The bomb was planted in a car parked outside a tavern in Killeter owned by her father, Frank Dolan. Early today, doctors were fighting to save his life and those of two customers cut by flying rubble and glass. Three other persons were wounded less seriously.

Neighbors said Miss Dolan left the pub a few minutes before the explosion, crossed the street, put her invitations into the mailbox in front of the post office and headed back. Police said her mutilated body was found amid a heap of wreckage by a priest.

Police would not speculate on who might have been responsible for the bombing. But the Dolans were believed a Roman Catholic family, and it was at their door the automobile with the bomb was parked.

Killeter, in County Tyrone, is some five miles from the British province's western border with the Irish republic.

The post office, which also is the village general store, was wrecked by the explosion.

Hold Off Highway—Davis

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Construction of the $100 million-plus Mackenzie Valley Highway, the spine of any future pipeline corridor out of the Arctic, should be delayed at least a year, Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis has recommended to cabinet.

The highway is being pushed ahead too fast, experts in the environment department and on the one-year-old federal environmental advisory council have told the environment minister.

Davis and his senior officials have concluded that the environment department experts on the scene of the highway construction need more time to select the best possible route, designs and construction methods to safeguard the northern environment along the route.

Officials in Ottawa said Thursday they believe other major departments interested in highway projects, such as the energy and northern development, also agree that a delay in the construction would be advisable.

More specifically, Davis is recommending that construction scheduled for next winter be kept to an absolute minimum, so that environment department experts responsible for supervising environmental aspects of the construction can get far enough ahead with their research and planning to do the best job for the whole highway construction.

Such a stretching out of the construction would mean that the highway could not be finished before the winter of 1976-77, instead of 1975-76 as now tentatively scheduled, a senior environment department official said Thursday.

Davis indicated he hopes a decision will be made by cabinet on the recommendation before Christmas.

If accepted, a delay in the construction of the Mackenzie Valley highway could have a number of significant consequences.

For one, if the government

Family Lucky To Be Alive

Every inside wall of a five-room Langford home was destroyed within five minutes early this morning leaving nothing but burnt framework, Langford Fire Chief Allan LeQuesne said.

The walls of the house at 940 Terlane Pl., occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Williams and their two children, aged five and seven, were lined with plywood.

"We were there within five minutes and it had gone by the time we arrived. We managed to save a few Christmas presents," said LeQuesne.

Williams was awake at 3 a.m. today when a short circuit caused a light display to burst into flames. After an unsuccessful attempt at pulling the plug from the wall, he tried to extinguish the blaze by turning off the power but was unable to locate the master switch in time, said LeQuesne.

He then took the children out the front door. Thinking his wife was still inside, Williams went back in the front door. As he was going in the door, his wife went out the back door and the draft caused the front door to close behind him. He was not wearing a shirt and his back was burned. Langford firemen treated the burns.

"Every window was blown out and every door was destroyed," said LeQuesne.

"They had just bought $7,000 worth of new furniture and hadn't had it insured yet," he said.

Total damage was estimated at $14,000.

This is the second house that has gone within minutes after the fire has begun. The top half of another house, about a mile from the Williams residence, was destroyed four months ago, said LeQuesne.

"Unfortunately this type of wall surfacing is legal," he said.

Fifteen firemen battled the blaze for three hours and two of them received minor injuries, said LeQuesne.

The family was left with "absolutely nothing" and LeQuesne said any donations would be "greatly appreciated." They can be left at Langford fire hall, 716 Goldstream.

use on shore jobs, will be employed," he added.

"The wonderful thing about this project," he said, "is that we will be keeping these people located and employed in their own area."

"It will be a continuing process because most of the men have sons and they, too, will in time be trained and given work."

Ward said that there is a possibility that the Canora's old engines will be taken out and put on display in the Provincial Museum.

Ward credited Elworthy with saving the Canora:

"Americans wanted to buy her and make her into a convention centre at San Diego. He turned down a much larger offer. Mr. Elworthy told me, 'forget the Americans, you have first crack.'"

INVITATION TO DINNER

The Salvation Army is inviting homeless men to a Christmas dinner Saturday night.

The dinner is for men living alone, perhaps in a hotel room, and will start at 6 p.m. at the Men's Social Service Centre, 521 Johnson, Major Jack Barr said today.

Up to 250 men can be accommodated for the dinner, he added.

decides that construction of any pipelines down the Mackenzie Valley corridor cannot start until the highway is finished, then pipeline construction could not start until the winter of 1977, if not later.

Another major issue raised by the suggestion of a delay in the highway construction involves native peoples' employment.

The environment department proposal cautiously calls for maintaining work next winter, instead of halting it altogether, in order to keep some of the native workers in jobs.

... HIJACK

In regard to security at the local airport, Knowland said:

"We have some routines already in effect but in what areas, and how, naturally, I'm not at liberty to say."

Agreeing that tighter measures would also be enforced locally, Knowland said, "The great action is at the large airports at the moment but we can expect to have sterner measures here too."

In a news release today, Captain Charles Simpson, CALPA president, said the association would like all airports provided with good security systems.

The "Wabush" airport does not have an anti-hijacking security system.

The RCMP began advertising across Canada this week for special constables to work at airports across the country. The constables will have full powers of arrest and will carry weapons.

Delay: Thieu Blamed

Ronald Ziegler maintained: "We have a proposal now being negotiated on a ceasefire, and we support no other position on a ceasefire."

Ziegler referred to the permanent ceasefire envisioned in the nine-point peace plan worked on by Kissinger and Thieu since October.

Thieu has stoutly opposed portions of the nine-point plan, including its lack of formal provision for withdrawal of North Vietnamese troops from the South.

Diplomatic observers indicated that although the United States was supporting some of Thieu's demands, it was resisting others.

This, in turn, suggested that it might go as far as to sign an agreement with North Vietnam on its own, if the White House believed the settlement was fair and just.

Although such a move would not go down easily in Saigon, diplomatic observers said Washington and Hanoi were clearly powerful enough to enforce a ceasefire simply by cutting off the supply of weapons to South Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Moreover, while the speculation here is largely that the Paris talks so far have failed to solve all the outstanding problems, there also was belief that Kissinger and Thieu had arrived at a meeting of the minds.

On the war front, Communist gunners pounded targets around Saigon today, killing six civilians in a rocket attack on Bien Hoa air base and hitting a gasoline depot in Gia Dinh.

In a broadcast, the Viet Cong's Liberation radio claimed that guerrilla forces had taken a strong hold in the Saigon region which would encourage the people to rise up against president Nguyen Van Thieu's regime.

Bus Boost Speedup Vowed by Lorimer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer has shortened his estimate of the time it will take to improve Lower Mainland and Greater Victoria bus service.

He said Thursday he now hopes improvements can take effect by next summer, rather than in late 1973 as he originally predicted last month.

He also announced he will hire two experts to work in his department as planners and advisers on transit to assist the government in future policies.

And he said he will move shortly to establish a committee on transit with representatives of the provincial government, the Vancouver and Victoria regional districts and B.C. Hydro, as promised earlier.

Lorimer said he has been authorized by Hydro's board to take care of placing an order for 98 new diesel buses. The deadline for confirming a tentative earlier order is today.

The buses are to be used to extend hydro transit to outlying areas of Metropolitan Vancouver and Victoria.

Asked why the experts would not be attached to the Hydro division rather than the government, Lorimer replied:

"Basically because I am not convinced transit will stay within Hydro. The Greater Vancouver Regional District has expressed its desire to remove it from Hydro. I am completely open on that."

"The transit system is merely an extension of the highway system, there has to be a provincial input. And we are prepared to assist in a substantial way."

I wish to thank all those people who assisted me during the recent Municipal Election in Saanich, and those who supported me on Election Day, Dec. 9.

The Day a Hummingbird Came ... Even Though It Shouldn't

Remember October 8? Probably not. For most of you it was likely just another day — one soon forgotten. But for at least one Victoria family, October 8 was a day to remember.

Just ask any of the Ralph Davies clan (they live over in the Colquitz area) and they'll tell you all you want to know about October 8.

For one thing, they'll tell you it was a cool, overcast, threatening day with more than just a hint of winter in the air — certainly not the kind of day you'd expect to see hummingbirds in your garden.

Yet it was a hummingbird — an Anna's Hummingbird — that made the day memorable for the Davies.

Ralph Davies first saw the bird in the cold, grey dawn of that fateful day. It had been poking around a hanging basket of purple pansies and later was attracted to the red Christmas lights which are a year-round adornment of the Davies' home.

Since the regular hummingbird visitors to the Davies feeder — the Rufous Hummingbird — had long since departed for points south, the sugar and water supply had been withdrawn for the winter. Ralph quickly got it back into service.

By the next day, a bond had been forged between the Davies and the hummingbird which still holds despite the pressures of our Siberian scenery.

Any Anna's Hummingbird in its right mind should, at this time of year, be enjoying the salubrious offerings of central and southern California. Their normal home is west of the Sierra Mountains and south along the coast from about Eureka to Baja, California.

For some strange reason, winter finds a few of them as far east as Arizona, others on the islands off Santa Barbara, and some, north, occasionally as far as Vancouver Island.

They're a large hummingbird by our standards, being about half an inch longer than our familiar rufous hummers. But it is the males that carry the most conspicuous field marks, and the Davies bird is a male.

In good light the two iridescent, purplish-red patches of feathers, one on his throat, the other on his forehead, serve notice that he is truly an Anna's Hummingbird.

His arrival raised some questions in Ralph Davies' mind, on whether to feed or not to feed. Would he, by providing food, hold a bird in a climate in which it was not likely to survive? Or, would he, by withholding food so late in the season, seal the bird's doom?

The decision was to feed and feed it was through the rest of October and that glorious November. But, just when things were going so smoothly, December arrived with some of the coldest weather ever to hit Canada's banana belt. Once more, the hummingbird's future seemed bleak.

But the Davies kept the sugar and water coming. The hummingbird did his bit by accepting it.

Each evening, when it was almost too dark to see, the bird would make his last visit to fill up for the long, cold night that lay ahead. As he left, the Davies wondered what the next morning might bring.

But with morning, and despite temperatures which frequently dropped into the tens and gale-force winds which blasted west of the northeast, he'd be back, like clock-work, a little after seven.

His daily routine was built around the Davies feeder. Every 15 or 20 minutes, depending on the temperature, he'd arrive to sup. Between times he sought the sunny shelter of either the electrical hook-up of a house across the street or a small patch of bush nearby.

Sitting in the Davies' dining room, you could occasionally catch a glimpse of him across the street as the sun caught his brilliant throat and head patch. Once or twice he even took enough interest to forage for torpid insects or their eggs among the crannies of the bark of a Garry Oak.

Sometimes the fluid in the feeder froze soon after it was put out but there was always someone available to get it inside for thawing and renewal before the hummingbird arrived for his next feeding.

Now that temperatures have begun to moderate, he's changed his routine accordingly. Now a fill-up every 25 minutes is enough and he shows every indication of surviving — thanks to a timely hand from the Davies family.

Who thinks about emergencies at Christmas?

At a happy time like Christmas none of us like to think about an emergency but all of us should. Telephone traffic is extremely heavy at Christmas time, especially Christmas Day. B.C. Tel will have a full staff on the job, but... due to the heavy holiday load you could find it difficult to reach an operator immediately. To protect your home and family keep a list of emergency numbers handy by your telephone.

Fire — Doctor — Police — Ambulance — etc. Then should something happen you wouldn't need an operator to help you.

You could dial direct. To help you be ready for those emergencies, B.C. Tel is mailing cards to each subscriber. Put your emergency numbers on it and keep it beside your telephone.

PERON GOES SIGHT-SEEING

ASUNCION (Reuter) —

Juan Peron, the former strongman of Argentina, went sight-seeing in this Paraguayan capital today after renouncing his last hope of regaining the presidency of his country.

Peron flew to Asuncion from Buenos Aires Thursday night, leaving behind him a statement in which he formally rejected the request of his Justicialist Liberation Front to be its candidate in the Argentine presidential elections next March.

He left Argentina less than one month after returning from more than 17 years in exile on a self-proclaimed mission of "peace and national reconstruction." But he has promised to return.

The main purpose of Peron's visit to Paraguay is to express thanks for hospitality after he was ousted from power in Argentina by the 1955 military coup, following nine years of his reformist rule.

Today, he was to meet leaders of the Peronist faction living in Paraguay and visit beauty spots and museums.

Peron plans to stay here for two or three days, then travel to Peru and Panama before returning to his home in Madrid for Christmas, he told reporters.

Reuters correspondent Stewart Russell reported from Buenos Aires that Peron's renunciation of his party's candidacy came as no surprise.

He was officially banned from seeking electoral office by an Aug. 25 residency clause decreed by the ruling military junta led by Gen. Alejandro Lanusse. He now has cleared the way for his Justicialist movement to nominate a candidate who has a more than even chance of winning the election, while he himself remains on the sidelines as an "elder statesman" figure.

Bread Upon the Harbor Waters

The engagement of Mr. Arthur Erickson to supervise and guide the design of the Inner Harbor should prove to be money well spent. As an architect of international reputation with a number of well-known and widely praised accomplishments to his credit, he could perform a great service in ensuring that future developments on the Inner Harbor would be visually and functionally acceptable, in themselves, and that each would contribute to the unity and harmony of the Harbor as a whole.

Victoria in many ways demonstrates the dangers of haphazard development without regard to an overall plan which would ensure a unified result. The Inner Harbor is much too valuable a natural resource, and much too important to the appearance and the life of the city, to be permitted to evolve much longer without special organization and co-ordination.

Particularly today, when the city's ability to acquire key properties and the public's concern to achieve the best effects have become evident, there is an excellent opportunity to set a style for new additions, protect many good features that are already present, and lay the basis for a planned harbor of which the community can be proud.

It may well be that, if the present program proves successful, the same concept of expert consultation could be applied to other key areas of the city to ensure their development along lines compatible with the history and philosophy of Victoria. Some serious blunders have been made, but it is not too late to impose a plan of growth and construction — provided City Council can take on the necessary powers — which would protect the city from further errors of the type in which it is now embroiled. Topsy's growth can become very expensive.

In the meantime, Victorians will await with interest Mr. Erickson's thinking on the Harbor problem. His proposals, and the manner in which they have been sought, could spell a new era of planned advancement for the community.

Chancellor Robert Wallace

Last summer the University of Victoria conferred an honorary doctorate on its former acting president, Robert Wallace — at that time the highest of many tributes paid to him for a professional lifetime dedicated to the university and its predecessor, Victoria College. Now Convocation, the growing body of graduates and others directly associated with the institution, has added the further laurel of the chancellorship to his list of distinctions. The election will be widely approved.

On official occasions, the public may hear the name of Dr. Robert Thomas Duff Wallace and the style of address, "Mr. Chancellor." To this community in general and to friends beyond numbering, he will remain Bob Wallace, one of a very select and highly esteemed group of men and women to whom the university owes a debt that cannot be measured in ordinary terms.

As Bob Wallace sees it, his successful career has been a matter of recognizing a job that had to be done and of doing it. In accomplishment it is his habit to attribute his achievements to the help of those around him. The first personal pronoun seldom emerges except in his expression of appreciation for the support and assistance he has received.

Bob Wallace brings very sound abilities to his new position as well as exemplary character and dedication to the university. In honoring him the institution will be well served.

What's to Fill the Gap?

Departure of Bapco paint production to the mainland next year will be a serious loss to Victoria. The situation is not eased by the fact that it is the latest of many transfers which have depreciated Victoria's industrial establishment over the years. Loss of the payroll of the 155 employees will be felt in the community; the matter of future employment for the workers will present a serious individual problem despite the company's provision for about 50 through transfer to the mainland operation or retirement.

The hotel complex proposed for the Bapco site will, of course, provide employment in time, but of a much different type from that of the factory. The complexion of Victoria's economic life is inexorably changing.

It is difficult to argue with the company's economic logic: that the costs of transporting raw materials to the Island and the finished product back to mainland markets are too much to sustain in a competitive industry. But near total dependence on a seasonal industry such as the tourist trade would be hazardous for the community. There should be a stabilizing background of productive industry to counteract such a trend, even though the civil service, defence, residential retirement, tourists and university are apparently to be the destiny of the city.

Unemployed: Who and Why?

CALGARY — If the Federal Government's massive winter works program was designed to prime the political pump and start a flow of votes into the Liberal trough in Alberta, somebody goofed.

It is not so much that it is "too little and too late" as some critics say. That phrase, after all, gets worked to death by critics no matter what any government does. In this case, however, any government which demonstrates such an abysmal ignorance of the realities of prairie weather exposes itself to public ridicule.

The basic flaw seems to be that nobody has yet got around to asking: Who are the unemployed and why are they unemployed? Without those answers the government embarks, in the dark, on a massive make-work program for the construction industry. And it does so, in Alberta at least, at a time when that industry is frantically trying to fill job vacancies and drawing nothing but blanks.

Incentive to Holidays

One Calgary contractor blames the liberalization of the Unemployment Insurance Commission rules. Tradesmen in the $5 per hour bracket now suffer little privation during moderate layoffs, even without unemployment insurance. With it they have a potent incentive to take cold weather holidays.

"Let me give you an actual example," the contractor said. "Suppose a spell of severe weather forces us to shut down for a week. That period half-qualifies our tradesmen for unemployment insurance. Then along about the following Monday or Tuesday it moderates and we start getting ready to start up again. But if we call the men back to work on Wednesday or Thursday they won't come.

"By then they will have all but two days of their waiting period to qualify for unemployment insurance. Suppose they go back to work for two days and the weather turns bad again a week later. They'll be laid off again and will not get unemployment insurance until they have completed a two-weeks period after the second lay-off.

"Staying off work for two days is like taking out insurance against the weather for the next month. And sometimes if you count in the short term weather lay-offs, they are actually a lot better off doing nothing and drawing unemployment insurance."

All this may help to explain what has been happening to the construction trades in Alberta. In a recent interview in the Edmonton Journal, the manager of the housebuilders' association complained that his 300 member-employers could locate no skilled, semi-skilled or unskilled help through Canada Manpower, newspaper ads or private employment agencies.

He said one firm alone had vacancies for 75 employees. Another who needed 45 advertised for three weeks without getting a reply. So as far as Alberta is concerned the $22-million question is going to be where will the workers come from if and when these projects get off the ground?

Perhaps the answer will be from the ranks of the unemployed educational graduates who can't find teaching jobs, and from law faculty graduates who can't find lawyers to hire them as ar-telling clerks and as a result find the door to a legal career slammed in their faces.

According to Canada Manpower there are between 25,000 and 30,000 unemployed in Alberta, but how "unemployed" are they? Everybody has a story and seems to know somebody who has converted the Unemployment Insurance fund into a sort of Christmas savings fund.

The most common story this reporter encountered is the one about the stay-at-home housewife who on the morning of discovering she was pregnant rushed out and got a job so she could qualify for the unemployment insurance maximum after working for 14 weeks.

On the other side of the street are the legion of people who have regular employment and work at it 52 weeks a year less holidays. "Why," they demand, "do we have to pay into this unemployment insurance fund every payday when we will never collect a dollar in return?"

As there are ten times as many of those who don't collect as those who do, there will be no political dividends from them for any political party which increases the premiums they have to pay. And that is what Ottawa is proposing along with its winter works program.

Aside from everything else, there is the question of whether any make-work program creates any long term benefits for the community which embraces it. A Calgary official pointed to the late and lamented urban renewal binges as a case in point. Acres of tax paying lands were expropriated and their tax paying buildings demolished, to be replaced by public buildings, many of dubious merit.

The municipalities removed millions of dollars worth of buildings from the tax rolls and replaced them with tax consuming structures on which they must pay heavy maintenance costs through eternity. If the latest make-work program does get off the ground, the ultimate result may be more of the same.

Not This Winter

But will the program get cracking in time to ease the unemployment problem, if there is one in Alberta? No one who has survived a prairie winter will make any bets. And anyone who has noted how other government projects proceed at snail's pace would doubt that much will happen before the winter of 1973-74.

Ottawa has been promising to build a $33-million air terminal in Calgary for five years. Now and then a million or so has been siphoned into runaway alteration. Now it has discovered flaws in the legal structures of Alberta municipalities which raise questions about future building around airports. And what about the bird hazards. Do we, Ottawa asks, have any scientific studies on the relation of agricultural establishments to bird populations as a hazard to aircraft?

But wait until Ottawa starts running its works programs past local councils, regional and local planning boards and embattled residential property-owners who take to the courts to block most impinging projects at the drop of a writ.

Far from priming the political pump for the Liberals in Alberta, it is easy to see that Ottawa's make-works project may succeed only in silting up whatever gaps still remain half open for the Liberal party.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Answer to Mr. Lines

I was most disappointed to read in your issue of Wednesday, December 6, a letter from K. W. Lines, of Victoria.

Mr. Lines' statement that he received a letter from me "over a photostat signature" was absolutely false. I dictated and personally signed a reply to Mr. Lines after very carefully considering the suggestions he had offered. It was no form letter that he received from me. I personally sign all my letters and a lithographed or photostated signature will be found only on circular letters—and on Hydro cheques!

One of the main points of Mr. Lines' letter to me was that interim billing of customers was not the practice in Quebec, and was not necessary in British Columbia.

As I pointed out in my reply, utilities which provide only electric service may use bi-monthly billing but in operations such as ours, where most users receive both gas and electric service from us, bi-monthly billing is not considered practical. The reason, of course, is that combined bills for the two services, particularly during the winter periods of peak consumption, can represent a substantial amount of money over a two month period—more than the average person's monthly budget can absorb.

Therefore, to make it easier for our customers to keep abreast of their B.C. Hydro accounts, we issue invoices based on meter readings every second month when meters are read and issue interim bills based on a careful estimate of the customer's use during the intervening month. Any difference between our estimate and the actual amount of electricity and gas used by the customer is corrected the following month when the meter is read. For customers who prefer to budget their accounts we offer a 12-month equal payment plan.

I believe our customers expect that Hydro should operate efficiently and do everything possible to hold the line on operating costs, which ultimately have a bearing upon rates which must be charged. Bi-monthly meter reading was introduced solely for this purpose—a practice followed by many utilities in Canada and the United States.—G. M. Shrum, chairman, B.C. Hydro and Power Authority.

Pays Tribute

I think it is in order during this happy festive season that a well deserved tribute should be paid by the people of British Columbia to Premier Barrett and his New Democratic government for their Christian principles in giving to the aged citizens of this province.

It will be remembered it was only 35 years ago an aged couple were compelled to "sign on the dotted line" their home away, to receive a meagre $20 per month old age pension.

Premier Barrett is a young man, yet so few young people can ever conceive they will grow old, that he has set a unique and unprecedented example to all governments that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." In returning to the taxpayers some of the money they have contributed over the years. — "Old Age Pensioner."

This Is the BBC

Now that Mr. Trudeau has shown a willingness to have more cordial relations with Britain and may even have succumbed to the Queen's charm, would the CBC consider following his lead and let us have more news from the British Broadcasting Corporation? Just 10 minutes out of 18 hours broadcasting on AM radio with news from London, England.

I have written three times in the last few months to the CBC in Vancouver, without the courtesy of a reply, to try and find out what BBC programs they are or will be broadcasting, but they seem unwilling to admit they broadcast any. The radio programs in the local press are very uninformative on this point.

The 10 p.m. to midnight CBC so-called "entertainment" is so dreary, but once a week this is enlivened by "My Music" from the BBC. To hear this one must stay awake until midnight on Wednesdays. It starts at 11:30 p.m.

Could we not have something more conducive to a good night's rest at 10:30 p.m.? What about more "Maigret" series or similar serial plays, and not so many learned discussions? The latest promised us at 10:30 p.m. for 19 sessions is "Women". What a prospect! But perhaps the men will enjoy it.—Mrs. H. Swinburne, 2175 Curteis Rd.

Worse Driving

What has happened to good drivers in Victoria? I am a native of this city and have just returned after living in Quebec for three years. The difference in the quality of driving here in those three years is disappointing. People are driving on the wrong side of the road to make a left turn, jumping stop signs, tail-gating and passing dangerously.

I recently complained to a Saanich policeman about a very careless and dangerous driver I had encountered on the Pat Bay Highway. The policeman told me that there is no system for taking, and recording complaints, that I would have to call the driver to court.

I did not feel that the offence merited a court case. Rather the licence number should be recorded, and a warning sent to the man if there is a second complaint on his licence number. In this way citizens would be encouraged to complain about drivers who they think are endangering others.

These lower standards of driving could not develop with a constantly vigilant police force, nor with a conscientious public that was encouraged to complain. If we are not careful, we will reach Quebec "standards" — on every long weekend, over half of the traffic deaths in Canada occur in Quebec. — (Mrs.) Robin L. Rasmussen, 211 Robertson St.

Appreciated

I would like to commend the work of your reporter, Miss K. Collins. She recently interviewed me, and your paper subsequently published a well-done article about our handicapped son, Jeremy (December 6, 1972). The type of interview which Miss Collins has had to conduct for her series of articles is very difficult from several points of view, and speaking for myself, at least, I feel she has done very well. Mr. John McKay also took excellent pictures. Sympathetic and accurate treatment of problems such as ours is always greatly appreciated. — "Jeremy's Mother"

World Unity

The peoples of the world could divert the enormous resources that are now being spent on armaments to coping with the world's genuine and pressing economic problems — for instance, the inter-related problems of the population explosion, poverty and food supply.

The answer will be given by a small minority of the human race — the American and Russian minority that together is overwhelmingly preponderant in power.

In America the great debate has already started. It was generated by the war in Vietnam. The world outside the Soviet Union is less well informed about what is going on inside the Russian frontiers, but we may guess that if the debate has not already started there too, it is already on its way.

Some may hope that President Nixon will yet live to achieve the domestic objective he has at heart, and that is the mandate that has been given to him by the American people.

This will require a radical change in the outlook of both president and people. They will have to recognize that the bogey of monolithic world communism is a hallucination, and that world-wide nationalism is the political reality.

If President Nixon's America can see the truth, and act on it, she may find a congenial working partner in the Soviet Union.

The world state of total unity, if it wants to survive longer than the day of its bloody act of birth, will have to recreate the very thing it may have imagined it had destroyed forever — a world of small units, a world of little states. — A. D. C. McDougall, PhD, Friendship Inn, 39 Gorge Road East.

Combined Effort

On December 2, the Children of Vietnam Tag Day Committee held its fifth annual Tag Day in Greater Victoria.

The weather was cold and windy, but over 50 volunteers came out to help with the tagging and spent at least two hours each, outside in the cold. Others helped with arranging the equipment, counting money, sending out volunteers, etc.

The combined effort, including the help of the media in informing the public of the event, netted $1,391.36.

The amount of money collected was gratifying to the committee, and we would share our feelings with all those who participated, on all the levels including of course, the very important givers, by recording our thanks to all.

It showed us that many of the people in Victoria, have not forgotten the children of Vietnam, or their suffering and cared enough to share when given the opportunity to do so. — Children of Vietnam Tag Day Committee, Box 21.

Bitter Pill

"How much is too much to spend for a human life?" you asked in your editorial December 12. Mrs. Laporte could answer you that the limit is soon met. The fact that the cost to Canadian taxpayers of keeping the French-Canadian convicted insurgents in prison would equal a good part of the ransom demanded is a bitter pill to swallow on top of the bad medicine already dished out to her and her family. A man, one human, is very easily sacrificed for a principle. It's more popular to spend many thousands of dollars in a rescue attempt of the pilot and passengers of a plane in the North than it is to rescue a man from certain death at the hands of barbaric thugs.

Yes, let us make a decision about how much to spend on saving a life but let the decision stand for all kinds of rescue attempts. — "Lest we forget"

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of Dec. 15, 1912:

Great developments will be witnessed in the coastwise trade during the next year or two. The boats at present operating on their different runs, it is predicted, will be found inadequate and larger vessels will be required to take care of the business. There is a rumor current that the C.P.R. will construct two new vessels to cope with the expected increase of business. Although four new vessels have been added this year, the business still taxes the capacity of the fleet during the summer season.

The Psychic Scars of War Mar the Face of Cambodia

PNOMPENH, Cambodia — The sons of generals drive Alfa Romeos and Cougar fast-backs. The governor of a province is known to sell ammunition and drugs to the enemy.

Other government officials can be seen selling automatic rifles and uniforms to wealthy merchants, who in turn sell them to both sides. Low-salaried colonels—some accused of pocketing the payrolls of their units—build luxury villas here in the capital and rent them to Americans for $700 a month.

At the other end of the scale, hundreds of thousands of Cambodian refugees uprooted by the fighting and jammed into Phnompenh often cannot afford to buy enough rice, the price of which has rocketed as the Communists have blocked supply routes and officials have engaged in profiteering with the emergency supplies brought in by Americans.

The refugees live in new shantytowns, in empty railroad cars and with relatives in houses with wall-to-wall people.

This is the distraught face of Cambodia after two and a half years of war—a country of open green spaces that is now a country of human islands, where people huddle in the isolated towns and cities still under government control and await the next rocket or sapper attack by the Communist forces which are all around them.

By SIDNEY H. SCHANBERG
New York Times

"The mind protests," says a refugee who used to be a farmer and is living in a hovel and driving a cyclo—a cycle rickshaw—to earn a meager living.

He taps his forehead and wrinkles his face in pain to get his meaning across: "I used to work six months and relax six months. Now I have to work every day the whole year. And the only rice I can afford is the poor quality we used to feed to our livestock."

His litany of dejection is endless: "There is no way to leave the city. It is too dangerous. There is no place to take the family to play. All we have here is noise and smoke from the motorcycle and cars. This is a very bad time for the poor."

It would take a lot to truly despoil Phnompenh, to mar its soft and sleepy and pleasantly decadent visage, to turn it into a mean and debased Saigon—but some ugliness has intruded.

Though there is a 200-per cent duty on cars and only one has been brought into the country through the legal procedure this year, the streets of Phnompenh—once graceful, virtually empty avenues lined with flame trees—are crowded with the late model vehicles of the well-to-do.

Fatal accidents, a rarity before, have become common. On a recent morning, a Mercedes-Benz driven by a Frenchman struck a young girl on a main avenue. Her sprawled body lay for over an hour, its outline traced in chalk by the police, before it was taken away. A large crowd gathered on the sidewalk and stood silent, staring.

There are other new things—more barbed wire, more military policemen with whistles that always seem to be shrilling and a 10 p.m. curfew.

There are also new bars and dance halls—Tropicana, Miami, Golden Horse and Amigo Cult in anticipation of an American influx. Though some Americans do come despite an embassy edict discouraging it, those watering places are usually filled with Cambodian army officers spending money by the fistful on whiskey and girls.

The prostitutes who used to cruise the streets in languid armies of rickshaws that would deftly cut prospective customers off at the pass now operate more conventionally from the bars and from the sidewalks outside hotels.

Their language is also changing—from dulcet French to the crude GI-inspired pidgin English of the Saigon bargirl.

"You no. 1," coos Su Yen, a Chinese girl working at Korea House, where the band plays ear-piercing, electronically amplified American rock. "You come my house?" Su Yen persists. "You come tonight? Tomorrow night? You no. 1."

The Cambodian people are known for their easygoing, untroubled, laughing manner, but the war has cut its psychic scars.

A Swiss drug salesman said: "The biggest part of my business here has become tranquilizers. I know it sounds crazy. You see these people smiling all the time, they look happy. But they're buying tranquilizers now. They don't show it—the tension is all inside."

There are not many places a Cambodian can run to if the Communists attack his community. The enemy—the North Vietnamese, Viet Cong and Khmer Rouge—already controls at least three-quarters of the country, and 40 per cent or more of the population of seven million.

Only the larger towns along the main roads in the west remain in government hands, and most of these can be reached from the capital only by air because the Communists keep cutting the roads.

The shakedowns by government soldiers, which have be-

Cambodian army patrol guarding approaches to beleaguered capital come common, are not surprising, considering their pathetic pay—less than $20 a month at a time when food prices are soaring.

***
The corruption—in particular, the pocketing of army payrolls and the selling of food and military supplies to the highest bidder, including the enemy—is universally confirmed here by foreign diplomats and other independent observers.

A Western diplomat, referring to the traffic with the Communists, says incredulously: "It's as if British cabinet ministers sold Spitfires to the Germans in the Second World War. There's hope for this country in this atmosphere of corruption."

A road that is open more often than most is the one from Phnompenh to Kompong Cham, a province capital to the northeast.

Mik Ning, a 21-year-old inter-city taxi driver who makes the 180-mile round trip twice a day with his Peugeot usually packed, circus-clown fashion, with about 15 people, conceded the ride was risky but said it was too lucrative to give up.

He makes about 2,000 riels, or $10 a day—handsome pay in a country with a per capita income of $150 a year.

He said he saw the enemy all the time and that they treated him politely—"certainly better than the Cambodian army."

"The Cambodian soldiers keep asking me for money at different checkpoints along the road," he explained. "It makes travelling very expensive. Two weeks ago they asked me for too much and I refused and drove off without paying. They started firing at me."

Asked if there had been any damage, he said: "Not much—just one bullet hole in the back of the car. The only thing is, it killed one of my passengers."

Right after the federal election, I wrote a column which acknowledged that I had underestimated the perspicacity of voters. I went on to describe the menaces I had seen in the Trudeau elitism of the past four years. I made the point that I had never expressed these criticisms as fiercely as I was then doing.

Perhaps because many newspapers which do not run my column regularly had printed this particular essay, I got the largest mail from a single piece in the past five years. Almost half the 50 odd letters were in agreement, enthusiastic agreement. The other half were from those who thought the column "shameful and cowardly," "envious of the one great Canadian of our age," etc.

Two points stood out about this mail: every letter in agreement was from a man—all but two letters of criticism were from women. This took me to the Parliamentary reading room. I did a rough scan of letters to the editor in a dozen dailies across the country in the week after the election. There was a surprising abundance of letters interpreting, defending and complaining about the results. I noticed the same phenomenon as in my mail. Overwhelmingly the pro-Trudeau letters came from women, the anti-Trudeau or "thank God" ones come from men.

One phase of the critical reaction to my own effort was annoying but I deserved it. I was ridiculed by several writers for revealing a critical attitude to the Trudeau regime after it had been rebuffed, not before. Since I had the column and editorial freedom of comment this was seen as timid, if not cowardly conduct.

My defence here is simply that anyone reading this column regularly since 1968 would know me as consistent critic and debunker of the Trudeau-as-political-genius myths. What I had never wanted to do was to scream and scream, pointing and declaiming that this man and his courtiers were menaces to democracy as we know it in Canada.

World's Rich Get Richer While the Poor Get Guns

Two separate compilations made by the United Nations, when taken together, add up to one stark conclusion—that what the poor nations need most desperately is economic development aid, but what the rich nations burden them with are massive shipments of tanks, guns, and planes.

One of these sources of data, the recently published 1971 edition of the UN statistical Yearbook, discloses that in the past ten years the disparity in living standards between rich countries and poor countries has continued to grow.

In that decade the per capita gross domestic product of the developed nations rose forty-three per cent, while that of the still developing countries increased only twenty-seven per cent.

The Yearbook reported that in 1970 the developing countries, with a combined population more than twice that of the developed countries, consumed only a little more than one-seventh of the world's total energy output; thirty-six per cent was used by North American countries alone.

That year the United States, which leads the world in consumption of energy, burned an energy equivalent of 11.1 metric tons (2,205 pounds per ton) of coal per capita. The world average per capita is 1.9 metric tons, and most countries' per capita average is considerably less than that.

As for food consumption, the U.S. daily per capita intake is 3,200 calories; the average intake in many poorer countries in Asia, Africa, and Latin America is still less than 1,900 calories per capita per day.

Contrast all this with the findings of a recent U.N. survey which disclosed that world expenditures on arms and warfare—which totaled $120 billion a year ten years ago—now exceed $200 billion annually.

THE PROGRESSIVE

The U.S. report projects that even if future annual military outlays do not take more than their present level of seven to nine per cent of world output, the world will be spending $300-$350 billion a year on arms by 1980—or, over the whole decade of the 1970s, the incredible total of $2,550 billion.

Less than five per cent of the world-wide trade in arms is now conducted by private traders, the U.N. report noted. Governments and their huge military-industrial complexes are by far the biggest dealers in the weapons business.

Replying to U.N. survey requests, many governments provided figures designed to make it appear that their arms aid was nothing overwhelming. But Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, the world famous economist who heads the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI), has challenged their figures. "The statistic on aid and financial assistance," he said, "is grossly juggled and falsified, giving the appearance that (nonmilitary) aid and assistance from the developed to the underdeveloped countries is much bigger than it really is."

Four nations, according to SIPRI's 910-page study, The Arms Trade with the Third World, provide more than ninety per cent of all exports of arms to ninety-one developing countries where the wars of the last quarter century have been fought. The big four supplier nations are, in order, the United States (which "accounts for over a third of the world's total weapons"), the Soviet Union, Britain, and France. Suppliers on a much smaller scale are Italy, West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Belgium, the Netherlands, Israel, Sweden, Switzerland, Austria, and Australia.

Since 1950 the United States has exported in the form of military gifts and sales an astounding $70 billion worth of armaments, according to John K. Cooley in his comprehensive series on the global arms trade published in The Christian Science Monitor. As the world's greatest merchant of death, the United States inescapably bears the primary responsibility to press for international action to bring arms sales under control and then to a complete halt.

The country should set an example by replacing the export of U.S. munitions with the export to the developing countries of more of its foods, fertilizers, and machinery on an aid basis. The real enemies of man—hunger, illiteracy, and population pressure—cannot be overcome by guns in a world that already has fifty million men under arms.

Right and Wrong Blurred

By KENNETH BAGNELL
The Globe and Mail

A father and mother have written me a letter, asked a question and wondered if I might answer it here. It's a long letter, sad in some references, but very honest and it could have been signed by a thousand other parents in a hundred other towns of Canada.

"Is there really any sense any more," they ask, "trying to teach your children that some things are right and some things are wrong?" They have a son in university, a daughter about to go and they end their letter asking, "Can you give any light on how you teach kids that being moral is better than being promiscuous?"

They are not, contrary to what you may want to think, dull squares who don't know where it's at any more. Their letter disproves that, and for what it's worth, they are both in the professions and rather serious Unitarians.

As for their request, I'll answer it, but I'm sorry I cannot offer them a code to raise a family by. Maybe parents have to face the very unpleasant fact that today's young and maybe tomorrow's are destined to struggle to maturity in a time of profound confusion in the area of sexual morality.

And despite all the evidence and condemnations of permissiveness, the real demon in sexual life is the priggish puritan past which precipitated the whole mess we are now in. Much of the puritan tradition was exemplary, but on sex it was so troubled, it gave the whole psychiatric community enough work to keep it occupied for six generations.

Now we are trying to shake the knot off our backs, but we are hardly successful. The Strip along Yonge Street—the porn shops, the strip joints, the topless massages—strikes swingers as a symbol of new freedom, but it is really new bondage. We aren't freeing ourselves from sexual repressiveness, only reacting to it.

The exploiters: Topless dancer Carol Doda and San Francisco nightclub owner Dave Rosenberg protested this week against U.S. Supreme Court curb on liquor outlets.

Various ripoff artists, on to a good thing, are exploiting our neurosis, making a pile, and claiming to be prophets of a new emancipation. In fact, they are denigrating women, making goats of men and eviscerating sex. The knot on the back remains.

And it will not be removed by the pleasant notion that the new permissiveness leads to a new fulfillment. That's not the view of the most thoughtful of our social scientists nor of anybody with enough common sense to see its dead end. We're supposed to have more sexual permissiveness than in recent history. And we have a society of unhappiness and alienation along with it.

Still, the absolutes are gone and there is no way parents can appeal to the young on that basis. "Thou shalt not..." is as influential today as an Oral Roberts sermon in Hart House. I wish I could offer a packaged reply to the parents who want that. I can't.

As my own children grow into their teens, I hope our dinner table grows increasingly open and frank. And I hope most of all for two sons who will take life seriously, seriously enough to know that there should be no intimacy without commitment, and that a roll in the hay is not really sex, but a plastic moment for plastic people.

Mercedes-Benz announces a most unusual sale

This is an unusual sale because, unlike most manufacturers, Mercedes-Benz do not normally hold sales of any kind. But right now they are offering for sale a limited number of executive driven 1973 company cars. All models at considerable savings: all on an immediate delivery basis.

The reason for this special offer is that since their initial introduction the demand for our 1973 models has, in many cases, exceeded available supply. Mercedes-Benz are therefore placing their own immaculately maintained staff cars on the retail market—effective immediately. Your local dealer has a complete list of all cars available.

So, if you have ever considered owning a Mercedes-Benz, the car that has long been acclaimed "one of the world's finest cars", then now is the time to act.

Sample the superb performance and handling. Enjoy the luxury and security of a fine automobile. Test drive a Mercedes-Benz today, and make this the year you will finally own a Mercedes-Benz.

MARINE SCIENCE KEYNOTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and West Germany will undertake joint scientific projects, including specific research in marine technology and ocean science, under new co-operative agreements announced Thursday.

Officials of the two governments outlined to a news conference an unprecedented number of projects approved under a bilateral agreement on science and technology, which was signed between the two countries in April, 1971.

The announcements followed three days of closed work sessions under a proposed annual consultation during which the projects—under 12 major subject areas—were defined. Ten German delegates led by Reinhard Loosch, director of the international co-operation division, met Canadian delegates from several federal departments and five provincial governments.

The Canadian delegation was led by Dr. J. Rennie Whitehead, of the federal science ministry international branch. "These are not motherhood statements," Dr. Aurele Beaulieu, secretary to the science ministry, told a news conference at the end of the final session.

FIRM SUBJECTS
The meeting dealt not only with general policy statements, but with specific projects.

For example, in the general area of marine technology and ocean science, delegates worked out 25 specific projects for co-operation, exchange of scientists or industrial research projects.

Dr. C. R. Baker, ministry science advisor, outlined three examples of the specific marine technology projects:

—An arrangement for a new, high-speed German-developed sensor which measures conductivity, temperature and pressure to be installed in and tested by the Canadian towed underwater vessel at the Bedford Institute in Halifax. Scientists at Bedford will work closely with counterparts from the German hydrographic institutes at Hamburg and Kiel.

—An investigation into use of a Canadian-developed sonar system in German fishing fleets. The sonar indicates size and depth of fish schools.

—Development of a two-nation group of scientists to develop new and improved towing systems for underwater towed vehicles.

ASTRONOMY INCLUDED

Also approved was continued collaboration in radio astronomy, especially using the facilities of the National Research Council's Algonquin Park observatory near Ottawa and the Max Planck Institute near Bonn.

"These facilities are among the most advanced in the world and there would be considerable mutual benefit from simultaneous observations and joint experiments," officials said.

Other major subject areas included: Marine geology and geophysics, marine biology, physical and chemical oceanography, marine pollution, aquaculture, industrial fish processing, communications satellites, waste water treatment and solid waste management and use of computers in public administration, education, medicine and public health.

Preliminary discussions also were held on future research activities in transportation systems and urban affairs and housing and construction standards.

2 HELD IN ART THEFT

TORONTO (CP) — Two men were arrested Thursday night in connection with the recovery earlier in the week of $300,000 worth of stolen paintings and art objects.

Harold Alan Casquanette, 34, and Danny Steven McCann, 21, were charged with possession of stolen goods, possession of devices to open coin-operated machines and possession of burglary tools.

William Garfield Arnold, 27, was charged with similar offences Tuesday after police recovered seven paintings stolen during an October break-in at an art dealer's home in Pickering Township.

Ont. to Make Public Interlocking Directors

TORONTO (CP) — Corporations registered in Ontario now must inform the government each year of all interlocking directorships involving members of their boards of directors.

An amendment to the Corporations Information Act, moved by James Renwick, minister of consumer and trade (NDP—Toronto Riverdale), was accepted by John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, during a lengthy debate on the bill early today.

The amendment makes it mandatory that all Ontario corporations file an annual summary indicating whether each director "is a director of any other corporation related to the corporation and if so, the name of such corporations and the jurisdiction of its incorporation."

Mr. Renwick's amendment followed another, made by Mr. Clement, that corporations must not only supply annually the names and addresses of their directors, but also state "whether or not each director is a resident of Canada."

Mr. Renwick praised the phrasing of Mr. Clement's amendment since it solved the "problem of discrimination against people that is prohibited under the laws of Ontario by the Ontario Human Rights Code, by requiring the disclosure of the nationality of somebody who is not a Canadian."

"I think the minister has very wisely eliminated that sense of discrimination in the legislation," he said.

Mr. Renwick described his amendment as an attempt to find out whether directors of companies carrying on business in Ontario "are also directors of other companies within a particular corporate web."

"This is an essential ingredient in determining... who controls Canadian operations," he said. "It's very easy for the government to say it's a good idea to have a majority of directors in Ontario as resident Canadians. That does not solve the problem, however, if they are a subsidiary of the Pirelli Corporation in Italy."

Miller Holds Lead In UMW Voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Miners for Democracy reported today its candidate, Arnold Miller, is holding his lead toward ousting President W. A. (Tony) Boyle of the United Mine Workers in a court-ordered election.

The Miller camp's vote count, which has been consistently accurate and ahead of the official government tally, showed him with 53,804 votes to 41,983 for Boyle with approximately 70 per cent of the vote counted.

Soprano Performs In Art Gallery

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — An for an opera star to perform, art gallery is a strange place but soprano Irene Salekma did just that. She sang at the Oshawa Art Gallery recently, as a special favor to Glen Cumming, gallery director. "It's a good thing to get people interested and involved in any of the arts," she said.

DEPORTATION ARGUED

OTTAWA (CP) — Millionaire Harry Brooks was pictured in the Supreme Court Thursday as a man the immigration department desperately wants to deport.

Joseph Sedgwick, a Toronto lawyer acting for Brooks who now lives in Vancouver, told the high court that the department first tried to label Brooks as a member of a prohibited class.

This was based, he said, on a deportation order issued by the president of the Philippines. It alleged among other things that Brooks and Business associate Harry S. Stonehill had "established a network of corruption reaching into practically every important office of the Philippines government."

None of the charges was ever proved, said Sedgwick, although Brooks had to refute them in lengthy proceedings before a special inquiry officer who ordered Brooks deported.

Brooks then went to the immigration appeal board which set aside the deportation order. The government is appealing that order to the Supreme Court.

After hearing arguments Thursday, the court reserved its decision.

Sedgwick told the court that the government, to establish the appeal launched in the Supreme Court, must have made a "minute investigation" of all the papers Brooks signed when he applied for landed immigrant status.

The government alleges that Brooks made false or misleading statements at the time of entry and that, if the true facts had been known, Brooks would not have been allowed to come here in 1963.

C. R. O. Munro, appearing for the government, said the government case centres on a number of answers that Brooks gave the immigration department.

In one answer, Brooks said he had never been convicted of a crime. Munro said Brooks was convicted of bigamy and that a conditional pardon he received did not wipe out the conviction.

Young 'Should Have Quit First'

The only proper thing for former Campbell River high school principal John Young to do if he wanted to sabotage the system was to get out of the system and attack it from outside, lawyer J. S. Clyne said Thursday.

Completing his legal argument for the school board at an inquiry hearing Young's appeal of his Sept. 8 dismissal, Clyne said Young's avowed aim was to destroy the public faith in the educational system, a system which Young said the public had faith in without basis.

"There is clear evidence from Mr. Young's testimony that he was carrying out his objectives," Clyne said. "And those objectives were not consistent with the position of a school principal."

Young's advice to youth was to qualify for positions in the system then sabotage it from within, Clyne said.

"What is the system?" It's the Public Schools Act ... with Mr. Young's turn of phrase I am sure he would have done very well in the legislature, and that's where to start if you want to change things."

A three-hour presentation by Clyne and a half-hour rebuttal by Young's lawyer John Laxton ended the hearing, which sat for 11 days, received 103 printed exhibits and heard 11 witnesses.

Board of reference chairman B. J. B. Morahan, 67, said he hoped to hand down a decision within a week. "The board can either uphold Young's appeal, in which case he would be reinstated, or reject it."

Laxton claimed earlier that the rules were a "blatantly illegal" attempt to rewrite the Public Schools Act.

Young's outspoken objection to the rules, expressed in what the board's grounds of dismissal termed a "divisive, inflammatory, insulting and grossly insubordinate" memo, was the culmination of Young's continued resistance to the board and its officials, Clyne said.

"Criticism is one thing, but destructive and inflammatory criticism is another thing, criticism that Young knew could only further polarize the school district of Campbell River."

Young was responsible for ripping the school district in two, maybe three or four, Clyne said.

"His philosophy was one of resistance all the time," Laxton replied that it was "arrant nonsense" to suggest that Young should have left his job to criticize what he thought was wrong with the educational system.

"Does that mean a lawyer can't speak out against injustice? Does a doctor have to resign before he can correct things he thinks are wrong?"

Does this mean no professional man can remain in his profession and attack things that are wrong?"

"Mr. Young did use colorful language and he doesn't apologize for that," Laxton said. But the board of reference should "take it in its context of a person advocating changes in the system, and that shouldn't be a reason for firing a man."

Laxton said Clyne had not shown that the school board's set of rules were legitimate. He said although Section 97 (b) of the Public Schools Act gave the school board general powers to enforce policy, those general powers were derived from the particular powers outlined throughout the rest of the act, and nowhere in the act did the school board have power to exercise certain specific controls over attendance that the August rules attempted to impose.

Laxton said Clyne had not shown that the school board's set of rules were legitimate. He said although Section 97 (b) of the Public Schools Act gave the school board general

Review Reprints First Issue

The Sidney Review celebrates its 60th anniversary this week with a reproduction of the front page from its first issue dated December 13, 1912.

Major stories herald construction of Sidney Sanatorium (now Rest Haven Hospital) and urge extension of the B.C. Electric Railway to Sidney.

The Sidney Board of Trade urges immediate action on a breakwater (still being fought for in 1972) and complains of inadequate water supply (a common grudge in 1972 municipal elections).

The anniversary edition includes advertisements from Local Butchers and Hotel Sidney, both of which were in existence before the Review began publication, also Victoria firms W. and J. Wilson Ltd. and Standard Furniture Co. which advertised in the first issue.

PROFS GRADED BY STUDENTS

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A procedure whereby students can evaluate their professors and thus affect their promotions was approved by the University of Western Ontario senate Thursday.

Under the new plan all faculties, schools and departments must distribute a questionnaire to students and give them class time to mark the cards.

The students will evaluate instructors on characteristics ranging from speaking ability and how well they answer questions, to interesting presentation and general effectiveness as a teacher.

The final question will rate the professors from "outstanding teacher" down to "a very poor teacher."

The results will be held by deans until examination results are returned to students, then summarized for presentation to the committee on promotion and tenure. A lecturer who gets a bad mark from his students would have trouble getting a promotion or achieving tenure.

The senate move was criticised by Robert Stikeman, president of the student council which for three years has been attempting its own evaluation.

Several members of senate criticised the questions as not being applicable to all sections of the university.

Rescue Bid

Three minesweepers and the Coast Guard work boat Quadra II were still searching this afternoon for a small vessel which was reported out of fuel and drifting six miles south of Race Rocks.

"We're still trying to pin him down — he didn't give us a very good position to go on," said a spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt.

The duty officer at the centre said the boat's distress message was picked up by U.S. authorities and relayed here.

Winds in the area were getting "pretty strong," he added.

Heroin 'Pawn' Gets Year

A 19-year-old woman, described by Judge William Ostler as "a small pawn in the deadliest of games" was sentenced in provincial court today to one year in prison and placed on two years' probation for trafficking in heroin.

Win Some . . .

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — The Hiroshima High Court acquitted former policeman Tamotsu Okabe Thursday of a charge of murdering six members of a family but sentenced him to a six-month suspended sentence for stealing a manhole cover. The acquittal ended a series of trials which began in 1956. Okabe, 54, spent 14 years in jail during the trials.

bation for trafficking in heroin.

Janice Faye Bateson was arrested Dec. 1 after selling heroin to RCMP officers at a Linden Avenue location. She pleaded guilty Dec. 4.

Crown prosecutor Mike Hutchison said the Crown regretted it had to ask for a prison sentence, in view of the accused's youth and her lack of previous convictions. He added, however, that a jail sentence was required as a necessary deterrent.

In passing sentence, Ostler said that he recognized that Bateson was "a very small pawn in the deadliest of games . . . you are no match for the vultures . . . who are really profiting" (from the heroin traffic.)

"I am very sorry that I cannot punish the real criminal who has put you up to this," said the judge.

Bateson admitted Dec. 4 that she was a heroin addict, having been on the drug for two years, and now needed four to five caps a day.

Labor Calls for Industry

The Victoria Labor Council urged the provincial government Wednesday to "take steps to effect more dynamic industrial growth to aid job creation" in Greater Victoria.

In a telegram to Premier Barrett, the council said the closure of Bapco Paint factory next year "dramatizes the plight of the local labor force in a city of diminishing industry."

The council also said the current situation is "compounded by apathy of local municipal leaders who fail to appreciate that employment is imperative."

The labor council was "willing to assist in any way we can" to bring about improved economic prospects "and to counter adverse local industrial situation."

Children's Play At Langham Court

A five-day series of shows for children from Grades 3 to 7 will be presented at Langham Court Theatre by Company One, Monday, Dec. 11 through Friday, Dec. 22.

One's improvisation repertoire, uses Christmas themes and traditions.

Show times will be 10 a.m. (except Tuesday) and 1:30 p.m.

Schools interested in class bookings can make arrangements by contacting the Company office at 477-9544.

Otherwise no reservations are necessary. There will be a small admission charge at the door.

A LITTLE SHERRY ON NEW YEAR

Oak Bay residents will be treated to their first municipal New Year's Day reception this year.

It will be from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the senior citizens' centre on Monterey.

Invitations to the event, were included in the recently-mailed news letter from Oak Bay council.

This will be one time the municipality will forsake its usual tea and crumpets image.

The fare Jan. 1 will be sherry, consommé, sandwiches, cake and coffee.

Salvage Closure Ordered

A breakup of a large log boom off the Valdez Island bluffs has resulted in a 10-day closure on independent log salvagers.

The closure, which applies to waters adjacent to Valdez, Galiano and Gabriola islands, was put into effect Wednesday by the British Columbia Forest Service.

A spokesman said today the closure will allow the logging companies time to carry out their own salvage operations.

There are between 600 and 750 individuals licensed to pick up drift logs. Licences, costing $100, are issued annually.

The Bengal Room Caper —It's No Place for Jeans

Being some random items from a man's personal diary:

Item: To reading about Bob Hunter's adventure in the Empress' Bengal Room where, it seems, he was temporarily barred for wearing jeans, and I must say it gave me a swift, sharp pain right here. I am with the dear old hotel all the way and if the Sun columnist's eventual admittance sets a precedent I'll be very sorry.

Hunter calls the Bengal Room "more silly than sumptuous." The heck it is. It is a mighty nice, handsome, elegant room, the kind of place where you take visiting friends for a pre-dinner drink because of its atmosphere and pizzazz. If it is to become peopled by drinkers who look as if they should be guzzling wine under a bridge somewhere we'll lose yet another of our town's charms, camp though they may be.

Strikes me that Hunter, in his jeans and worn cowboy boots and muttonchop whiskers, is the worst kind of modern poseur, a conformist in that school of inverse snobbery that comes out as total insincerity and affectation. He is a highly successful man — let's face it, a capable writer — who could dress any way he pleases. So the facade is elected, by his own decision. When he writes of the Bengal Room's waiters ("some poor economic slave forced to wear the sort of uniform one used to see worn by the monkey who held the organ-grinder's cup") he simply reveals the shallowness of his own choice of costumes to create a desired effect. The waiter is dressed that way as a part of an honorable profession. Hunter is dressed his way, I suspect, to announce that he is a character, a free soul, an ecologist and the owner of a Volkswagen bus.

I am all for a little bit of occasional elegance and color in this increasingly drab world, contrived or not. The passing fad of youth in wearing carefully faded denim is their own business, but when it slops over into a middle-aged man's way of life and becomes something I have to look at in a place I've selected for its style and eye-appeal I figure it's time for a little whistle-blowing.

I have my rights, too.

Item: Some talk around the office this afternoon about year-end stories and the thought occurred to me that The Man of the Year might well be the Belfast plumber who was shot dead by British soldiers who mistook the tools of his trade as lethal weapons.

Looking back, it seems to have been the year of The Innocent Victim, the poor boob caught in the middle of all manner of conflicts neither of his making nor his direct involvement.

I find myself thinking of those thousands of airline travellers who suddenly found themselves at the mercy of hijackers, whose lives were not merely in jeopardy, but used as a bargaining agent for piracy in the wild blue yonder. Only a week or two ago there was that American professor, minding his own business in an Ethiopian jet, who found himself confronting a live grenade, surely a classic case of the continuing outrage against the innocent.

I think of the children of Ulster and Indochina and the Golan Heights killed or maimed in a senseless struggle for power or those who, nameless, anonymous, uncommitted, now handle the letter bombs on their precarious way to their intended targets, that most impersonal of all weapons.

I think of the old age pensioners and the young marrieds caught in the squeeze of inflation, the state rip-off in which most of us are caught and, indeed, in a time when we're being told that even our miracle drugs are a sham, the poor old consumer may just be the ultimate Innocent Victim.

Items: A reassuring letter today from Bill Matters, our London friend, telling me that I need not be concerned about the proposed changes in the British pub, that the committee on liquor licensing report merely seeks more liberal laws.

They're advocating longer hours for the pubs — 10 a.m. to midnight — and a lowering of the drinking age from 18 to 17, although polls show some two-thirds of all Britons are opposed to that. The committee wants more of a restaurant atmosphere so that families could enjoy them together. But they're a practical bunch (Graham Hill, the racing driver, is one of them) and Matters guessed rightly in thinking I'd enjoy one particular paragraph from their recommendations.

"We have to be careful not to over-romanticize," it notes. "The Continental cafe owes a lot to climatic conditions, and clearly fits in with the social habits of those for whom it is designed. In this country, it is difficult to see a cafe-pub as a resounding success on, say, a rainy day in a mining village, or outside a steel works in some isolated rural setting."

Christie (As Sylvester) Seeks Out the Canary

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

City hall produced its own version Thursday of that movie cartoon in which a scheming, hungry cat was forever bent on catching a cute canary — who invariably saw him coming and chirped "I taw I taw a puddy tat!"

Or words to that effect. In the city's scenario, Ald. Tom Christie was cast as the feline hunter.

He took the part seriously, did some nifty stalking and made it clear he was out to stifle the pesky bird's singing. But he never did give his co-star equal billing by revealing who was playing the cool canary.

It all took place during city council discussion of a committee recommendation that all future, non-routine requests for information from reporters be channelled through the appropriate committee or council members.

After accusing Mayor Peter Pollen of using such a device to "muzzle" the press, Ald. Percy Frampton pointed out that submitting requests for information in writing to the city manager, and subsequent procession through committee, would mean a delay of several days.

"By that time it's not news any more," he said. "That's what the boys (city hall reporters) are sore about."

Enter the Christie cat, snarling.

"We've all known there's a canary around here," he snorted, in an obvious reference to various "leaks" of secret reports and other confidential matters.

"Maybe this will eliminate the canary's singing," he added, as several aldermen went red-faced trying — generally unsuccessfully — to stifle their laughter.

Although Christie's shaft appeared to have been aimed at Frampton, he said no more at the time and declined to elaborate later for reporters.

He wasn't implying, he said, that the singing canary was a member of council.

Early in the discussion Pollen said the new method of

Part of the apartment zoning cloak which so thoroughly covers James Bay has been coyly lifted by the city's planning department, in its James Bay report presented to city council Thursday.

The study, which Mayor Peter Pollen said is only a tentative basis for discussion with residents before a community plan is adopted, suggests a down-zoning from the present medium density apartment use to duplex district for three areas of James Bay.

This, it says, is with a view to preserving the single family housing in the three areas "for at least the next 15 to 20 years and to exercise control as and when transition occurs."

The planners claim that if their lowered-density proposals are implemented the area's population will reach 13,500 to 14,000 over the next 20 years, or "43 persons per gross residential acre."

That compares with their estimate of a maximum 18,000 — or 57 persons per gross residential acre — over the next 25 to 30 years if the present, steady apartment development continues unchecked.

Alderman-elect Sam Bawlf, a James Bay resident and former president of the James Bay Community Association, said today he commends the "thrust" and motivation of the report in its attempt to respond to changing philosophies of growth and development, as well as to the stated wishes of James Bay residents.

But he added that the planners haven't gone far enough in cutting population growth back to a maximum of about 14,000.

He pointed out that as James Bay is less than half a square mile in total area, that's the equivalent density of 30,000 persons per square mile.

"Or, putting it another way, it would be like cramming the entire population of Victoria into less than two square miles," Bawlf said.

In answer to Bawlf's comments today, one city planning official said that taking into account Beacon Hill Park and other open spaces in or on the fringes of James Bay, a density of about 43 persons much lower than most mixed-apartment districts in Canada's residential areas," the official said.

The document which council formally received Thursday before referring it to the Advisory Planning Commission for detailed study is only a seven-page summary of the main James Bay report.

In a memorandum to aldermen accompanying the report, Pollen questioned whether the down-zoning from three and four-storey frame apartments to duplex should, instead, go one step further and rezone to single-family homes.

This, he said, would be recognizing "existing, quality single-family dwelling areas in the James Bay community" and it might "tend to reduce the speculative pressures placed upon single-family dwellings for apartment development speculation."

The "potentially viable" areas of detached housing cited in the planning department's report are:

A large area bounded roughly by Douglas, Menzies and Dallas, with a spur stretching as far north as Michigan.

And two smaller pockets, bounded respectively by Michigan, Simcoe, St. Lawrence and Oswego; and by Niagara, Dallas, Dock and San Jose.

The report says although these are zoned almost exclusively for medium-density apartment use they are not needed for immediate redevelopment.

Apart from the desirability of preserving single-family housing to maintain a balanced stock of family and non-family housing, this is also "feasible" in view of the interest residents have shown personally, and the likelihood of federal financial assistance with home renovation.

Other major recommendations in the report include:

—Designation of the commercial area around Simcoe and Menzies as the major shopping area for James Bay.

—Change the upland industrial area east of St. Lawrence to low-density multiple housing suitable for families.

—Liaison with the provincial government to formulate detailed plans for the so-called Legislative Precinct.

—Continued development of the "outer harbor" waterfront with marine and related industrial activities along the present scale and density.

—Creation of vantage points and public walkways along the outer harbor to link up with the system already proposed for the Inner Harbor.

—Regardless of the site's ultimate use, establish guidelines to safeguard public access to the disused VMD property at Shoal Point.

Federal Harbor Study Urged

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A federal study of Esquimalt Harbor fisheries, recreational and wildlife resources, has been urged by Richard Faulks, president of Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway Society.

Many of the harbor's resources are being wasted due to poor management, lack of planning, regulations and guidelines, he said.

Senior federal marine officials praised the proposal.

View Royal residents and recreational groups have complained that logging operations have taken over a good part of the harbor's water area for log booms to the detriment of recreation and fisheries resources.

The bottom of the harbor, they claim, is clogged with logs, beaches are ruined and marine life is gradually disappearing.

Oil spills, industrial pollution, plus residential pollution from Millstream have destroyed a commercial oyster bed.

Fewer and fewer fish are entering the harbor and clams are now no longer edible due to pollution, they say.

There are two industries situated on the east side of the harbor — Plummer Bay Sawmills Ltd. and Victoria Plywood Ltd.

Faulks said the harbor is ideal for a scientific study as it is a contained harbor nearly all under federal jurisdiction.

Log booms like this clutter Esquimalt Harbor

Knowledge gained from the study could be applied to solve management problems of larger harbors throughout Canada, Faulks said.

The study would also answer such questions as what conditions exist on the harbor's bottom as the result of continual booming, he said. Faulks noted in certain areas of the United States sunken logs are reclaimed.

"It could also look into other methods of storing logs, such as dry sorting," he said. "In this technical age, surely we can find better ways of storing and sorting out logs."

Larry Slaght, ministry of transport district manager, said Faulks suggestion has merit.

He agreed with residents that the logging industry often takes up more water space than they are entitled to under leases.

"Three leases have been issued for storing logs in the harbor," he said. "There have been occasions when the log booms have blocked the upper reaches of the harbor."

Slaght said periodically oil spills occur in the harbor but he is confident that the oil does not come from transport vessels refueling in the harbor.

"We have an engineer standing by while refueling and great care is taken that there are no spills," he said. "What precautions the navy takes in refueling, I don't know."

Slaght has no doubts that the bottom of the harbor is littered with sunken logs.

He disclosed the companies have been ordered to remove some of the sunken logs under their booms.

"They were starting to pile up pretty high," he said.

View Royal residents have for years opposed steady environmental decay of the harbor.

Reg Burton recalls a beach area which was rich in clams and crabs.

"They are all gone," he said. "The loggers just don't give a damn. They are taking over more and more water space. Sometimes boats can't get through due to their booms."

J. C. Sutherland, vice-president of the View Royal Ratepayers and Community Association, said successive federal governments have refused to co-operate with citizens in a plan to control log booms.

"We have asked the government to advertise whenever there is an application for a foreshore lease," he said. "They have refused to do so."

He noted that the provincial government advertises whenever any application is made for water area under its jurisdiction.

Sutherland backs a scientific study of the harbor. Herb Warren, former city parks administrator, who is familiar with the harbor's problems, said successive environmental policies so far have been piecemeal.

"They rectify one problem, but turn a blind eye to another," he said. "It's time we had scientific studies to upgrade all our harbors and make use of all their potential resources. This is sound economics."

EMI Opens Children's Department

The first three patients will be admitted Monday to a new psychiatric department for children at Eric Martin Institute, administrator Clifford Brown said Thursday.

The 10-bed unit will likely be filled by early January, he added. It will treat acutely disturbed children up to age 14.

The children's section, on the hospital's sixth floor, is only the second of its kind in British Columbia, the other being at Vancouver General Hospital.

Clinical director is Dr. Philip Ney, a child psychiatrist. A staff of about 20 has just completed a month-long training program.

ERICKSON TO PREPARE HARBOR PLAN

City council agreed unanimously Thursday, without discussion, to appoint Vancouver architect Arthur Erickson to prepare conceptual plans for the future development of a number of sites around the Inner Harbor.

Garbage Dump Permits Await Public Hearing

Applicants for provincial permits to establish garbage dumps won't be getting a speedy answer, a spokesman for the Pollution Control Branch said today.

James McCrossan said standards governing such permits are a "wide open" question to be settled after a public inquiry in Victoria next April into municipal waste disposal.

The inquiry, forerunner to establishing provincial controls, is the fifth of its kind conducted by William Venable, provincial director of pollution control.

Hearings have already been held into pollution control in the forest products industry, mining, chemical and petroleum industries and the food processing and agriculture-oriented industries.

McCrossan said the April inquiry will deal principally with sewage and garbage disposal, but the board wants to hear from subdivision and landfill operators as well as municipalities because they are involved with the problem as well.

The deadline for submitting briefs in advance is March 1, said McCrossan. But the branch wants to hear from those intending to make submissions by Jan. 15 so it can forward information to them.

CAT IN CUSTODY WRANGLE

A well-bred cat doesn't turn a hair at matrimonial property settlements, a judgment in Victoria provincial court showed Thursday afternoon.

When John Nelson, of 4095 Lockhaven and his former wife Barbara Cumming lived together, their home was shared by a Blue Point Siamese.

The couple later divorced, Nelson conceding that his former wife could take her cat with her.

But the Siamese thought differently.

Husband and ex-wife tried unsuccessfully to coax the cat to remain with Mrs. Cumming, now remarried. In the end, the cat's repeated returns to Nelson's home resulted in a compromise.

Nelson would be the owner of the cat, as long as he fed and looked after the animal.

Problems arose with this arrangement, however. On Sept. 12 Mrs. Cumming went to Nelson's residence to get the cat back. There was a struggle. Charges of common assault and theft under $200 (the cat) were laid against Nelson.

Thursday, Judge William

Ostler handed down his judgment on the case.

The judge dismissed the theft charge, saying that he believed "the purpose of this prosecution is not to right a wrong done by the accused, but to harass him."

The common assault charge was also dismissed, with the judge saying that Nelson came off worse from the encounter. Mrs. Cumming's injury, the judge said, "was suffered from the action of the cat."

Ostler added, "the conduct of the cat does not come within the compass of the Criminal Code."

Cougars Grab 'Lost' Points

NEW WESTMINSTER — Victoria Cougars lost the battle but won the war here Thursday night.

New Westminster Bruins, erupting for four goals in the second period, edged the Cougars 5-4 but lost the two Western Canada Junior Hockey League points because they refused to wear helmets.

Executive secretary Tom Fisher of New Westminster announced the forfeiture after officially receiving the game report from referee Al Paradise.

In addition to losing the points that would have provided the Bruins with undisputed possession of first place in the Western Division, the New Westminster club was fined $320.

A pair of points won by Calgary Centennials, with a 6-2 victory over the Nats in Vancouver, also were in jeopardy. A number of Calgary players were reported to have played without helmets and Fisher said this morning he will "take any necessary action after receiving the game report."

"Our league is bound by Canadian Amateur Hockey Association rules," said Fisher. "And these rules make it mandatory for players to wear helmets."

Fisher fined 16 New Westminster players $20 each. The only one to avoid fines were New Westminster's two goaltenders and Denis Anderson, the only Bruin who wore a helmet.

The Cougars did not lodge a protest. Fisher, who attended the game, took the default action on his own initiative.

Winger Marty Kissel's goal with less than four minutes to play snapped a 4-4 tie and wrecked a strong Cougar comeback, but it was a second-period letdown that did the greatest damage to Victoria's cause.

Ahead 1-0 after the opening period, Cougars fell behind 4-1 in the second.

Ron Kennedy and Vic Mercedi got Bruins going with power-play goals, then Bob Blodeau made it 3-0 while the Cougars enjoyed a man advantage. Blodeau then added his second goal later in the period while both teams were playing shorthanded.

Defenceman Ed Boucha, Carl Cureatz, Dave Faulkner and Al McLaren scored for Cougars. McLaren aggravated a knee injury after scoring his goal that tied the game 4-4 in the third period. The injury, however, is not considered serious and McLaren is expected to be ready for play Tuesday night when the Bruins and Cougars meet again in Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Faulkner and goaltender Danny Rogers turned in Cougars' strongest performances.

At Vancouver, Mike Clarke and Jerry Holland each scored twice to give Calgary its victory over the Nats.

At Brandon, in a decision that is not expected to be changed, the Wheat Kings bombed Swift Current Broncos 13-4 with Ron Chipperfield supplying five goals. In hitting for his second five-goal performance of the season, the 18-year-old Chipperfield raised his goal count to 38 in 26 games.

Kings: Pulford's Plans Start Paying Dividends

This year's edition of the L.A. story, nearing the best seller list, had its first chapter written in Victoria this fall, the Kings currently being the surprise team of the West division of the NHL.

Perhaps the best is still to come, but in Los Angeles, especially, it makes better reading now than it did back then. That's when new coach, and former player, Bob Pulford, put his personal plan for success into operation. Pulford had agreed to coach the Kings on certain conditions: that he have complete control, and that he get club backing for some new techniques, new to the NHL, at least.

If he wasn't exactly certain that the players would go along with some of his ideas, he had to find out — early. The players got the word before camp even, the day they received the revised players manual. Because in it was detailed part of the Pulford plan for the future.

"It is imperative that all players report to camp in good physical condition."

"You are advised to begin or continue a preparation program that will have you ready to go to work."

"This program might consist of isometrics, weight lifting, riding a bicycle, calisthenics, jogging, wind sprints."

In 20 Years, Nothing Like It

On arrival at the Empress Hotel, there was more in store for the Kings.

"Prior to breakfast each morning, you will take part in physical training conducted by an armed forces sergeant."

If that was the general outline, for a start, for the winnow, the Kings had their butts worked off, and not just on the ice either. So much so that veteran defenceman Harry Howell, 40, wryly commented:

"I've been playing in the NHL for 20 years and never went through anything like this before."

There were other Pulford plans yet to come. One would take place at Culver City, site of the Kings' practice arena, a necessity as the Forum is only rarely available for practice during the season. There the Kings would be under the guidance of an expert physiotherapist, who would keep the fitness program going.

It has long been the feeling of general manager Larry Regan that the double travel engaged in by the Kings has been one of the prime reasons for their downfall. Basically, he felt the club lacked a sound conditioning program.

"This will be a scientific approach, done in a scientific manner," he said of the new look for what was mainly the same old team with only a few fresh faces.

Mobility, Chalk Talks, Films

Down on the ice, there was a difference too. Pulford wasn't allowing the players to stand around, waiting for the puck, waiting for their "turn" to shoot. They would be, and were, doing something else — exercising, skating, stretching.

"Mobility" was a key phrase.

Besides, there would be chalk talks, and perhaps better, instructional films, and playbacks.

These would include clips from the Russia-Canada series. The Kings' home games would be filmed for later viewing by the coach and the players. The stop-start button would be over-worked. Mistakes would be analyzed.

Plus a throwback to football — a player's playbook. This would be required reading and would be kept up to date. Questions would be asked, and results tabulated.

"It may take time," Pulford said here shortly before the Kings broke camp, "but right now the players appear to enjoy it. And they are working at it."

Now, Pulford must be pleased indeed. Because the players have accepted change, and made it work. That's a big plus. But then perhaps they had no choice. For as Regan also said when camp opened:

"Any hockey player who does not react favorably ... shouldn't be drawing down an NHL salary."

That was required reading too. (Other teams please copy).

Seattle Favored In Hoop Tourney

Seattle Ruth Realty appears to be the team to beat in the inaugural Greater City Basketball Classic starting Saturday at Central Junior High School.

The Seattle club is top-seeded in the four-team single-knockout men's tourney with Victoria Scorpiion Men's Wear ranked second. Unknown quantities are the North Island All-Stars and an all-star squad from the Victoria Senior "B" League.

Seattle boasts four former All-Americans on its team as well as two former professionals — guard Al Hairston from Seattle SuperSonics and Dick Brott of the old Buchanan Bakers.

Scorpiion's biggest asset is their shooting ability. While dropping two games against Seattle recently (93-80 and 107-97), the Victoria squad shot 59 per cent from the floor.

North Island All-Stars have yet to play together as a team but could be led by Alex Brayden, a recent University of British Columbia varsity star who is considered one of the best in Canada.

The Victoria Senior "B" All-Stars likely will contain such players as Jim Mackay, Dave Wirtanen, Ron Bowker, John Hart, Brian Craig, Bob Hucul, Ed Steele, Jim Cunningham and Barry Turner.

Scorpiion's tackle the Senior "B" Stars in the 7 p.m. opener and Seattle faces North Island at 9.

Loser will meet in a playoff for third spot at 1 p.m. Sunday and the winners clash at 3.

Gulls Trip Leaders

Cellar-dwelling JBAA Gulls staged a four-goal rally in the third period Thursday to upset first-place Stockers North Americans 5-3 in a Victoria Intermediate Hockey League game at Peakes Arena.

Stocker's led 1-0 after the first period and 2-1 after the second frame before Gulls exploded.

HAL CAN WORRY WHILE BUD RESTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bud Polle, general manager and vice-president of Vancouver Canucks of the National Hockey League, stepped down under doctor's orders Thursday.

Polle, who had been put in hospital three weeks ago for what had been described as exhaustion, underwent further tests Wednesday and doctors said he should sever his connections with the team for an indefinite period.

Thomas Scallen, president of the team, said Hal Laycoe, who had coached the Canucks in their first two seasons in the NHL and was then kicked upstairs to vice-president, will take over Polle's duties.

Polle, 48, had been general manager with Philadelphia Flyers of the NHL and San Francisco and Edmonton in the Western Hockey League before joining the Canucks.

"I don't envy Hal Laycoe, he's not exactly inheriting the (Montreal) Canadiens," Polle said.

The Canucks are in sixth place in the NHL's Eastern Division, ahead only of the first-year New York Islanders.

Butt Rule 'Stupidest'

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Entrepreneur Jack Kent Cooke says he has offered a lot of money to heavyweight champion Joe Frazier to fight Muhammad Ali. But he believes a California locale poses the major problem.

Cooke, who owns the Forum, home of the Los Angeles major league basketball and hockey entries, wants the rematch held there and so far hasn't budged off the position. Since he financed the $2.5 million each to Frazier and Ali for their first meeting, he holds the aces.

Also, contracts say he has the say.

Frazier's manager, Yank Durham, said in New York this week that his fighter wants $4 million to defend against Ali whom he defeated in their initial meeting nearly two years ago.

Has Cooke offered $4 million?

"Money is a matter of negotiation, I'm sure you know that," answered the multi-millionaire sportsman.

And Frazier indicated he might want more than goes to Ali as the challenger. Has he been offered more?

"Again, all I can say is that this is a matter of negotiations," Cooke replied.

Although Cooke agreed the California rules might be more the stumbling block than the Forum, he said he had "no opinion" on whether rules should be changed.

Durham said in New York that "California would have to waive some of its rules before ever, was somewhat modified from the previous night in which they engaged in four separate fights. Only 10 minor penalties were called in the New York game.

"Those first two periods were the best we've played this season," Boston coach Tom Johnson said following the game. "Over-all, this was our best game of the year offensively.

"We also played much tighter on defence," Johnson admitted, along with Ranger coach Emil Francis, that New York was missing the defensive efforts of rearguards Brad Park, Jim Neilson and Dale Rolfe — all out with assorted injuries.

Interest Denied

CHICAGO (AP) — Arthur M. Wirtz, owner of the Chicago Black Hawks, denied Thursday reports he had acquired interest in another National Hockey League club, Vancouver Canucks.

"I have no interest whatsoever in the Vancouver club and I don't know a damn thing about it," the wealthy Chicago real estate operator said.

The report originated with disclosure in court proceedings at Minneapolis that Wirtz has acquired holdings in the Medical Investment Corp. which owns the Canucks.

Relative to the report he has become Medico's largest stockholder, Wirtz asserted: "I have a small amount of stock, but I have no connection with management or anything else."

"I know nothing of the Vancouver hockey set up which is an entirely separate deal."

Ealey Won't Ask, But He's Ready to Listen

TORONTO (CP) — Chuck Ealey won't take the initiative to renegotiate his three-year contract with Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Ealey quarterbacked the Ticats to the Grey Cup this year in his first professional season.

"I signed a contract and I don't think I should ask to have it changed," said the 22-year-old, here Thursday to accept the car he won as the outstanding player in Ticats' 13-10 win over Saskatchewan Roughriders on Dec. 3.

"But if Mr. (Ralph) Sazio thinks some changes could be made, then I would be quite happy to discuss the matter with him."

Ealey had impressive credentials when he signed with Hamilton early this year, including undefeated records throughout high school and at the University of Toledo (Ohio).

But not one of the 26 National Football League clubs selected him in the 1972 draft, a fact that surprised not only him but CFL fans who watched him perform this year.

"I still don't know what they look for in a quarterback," Ealey said to reporters at the reception where he received his car.

The six-foot-one, 195-pounder, who posed as a threat for opponents with his running as with his passing, admitted no spokesmen for NFL clubs had talked to him.

"Let's put it this way. I don't think they're supposed to talk to me because I'm under contract. So if they had, I'm afraid I wouldn't tell you anyway."

Voters Pick Swim Stars

LONDON (AP) — Olympic swimmers Mark Spitz of the United States and Shane Gould of Australia have been voted 1972 Athletes of the Year by Associated Press writers and newspaper readers in Europe.

Spitz, 22, of Carmichael, Calif., won a record seven gold medals at the Olympic Games in Munich while the 16-year-old Miss Gould won three.

Grid Fans Face Feast

Football fans in the Greater Victoria area this weekend will be able to watch three of the five National Football League games that will decide final playoff positions.

Scheduled for television are the Minnesota at San Francisco (channels 7 and 12, 1 p.m. Saturday), Kansas City at Atlanta (channels 2, 5 and 6, 10 a.m. Sunday) and Detroit at Los Angeles (channels 7 and 12, 1 p.m. Sunday) games.

San Francisco, Atlanta and Los Angeles are still in contention for the National Con## ference West division title. The winner will play host to Dallas, Dec. 23.

Other playoff games slated at the weekend before Christmas Day will be Oakland at Pittsburgh or Cleveland Dec. 23 and Cleveland or Pittsburgh at Miami as well as Green Bay at Washington, Dec. 24.

No telecasts of games involving Cleveland or Pittsburgh are on this weekend's schedule of stations seen in the Greater Victoria area.

Conference playoffs will be held during a doubleheader Dec. 31 and the Super Bowl is scheduled for Jan. 14.

Salmon Fishing Picks Up; Steelheaders Still Happy

Action seems to have picked up a little on the salmon fishing front while steelhead anglers continue to enjoy good returns from several Vancouver Island streams.

Spring salmon up to 10 pounds have been landed between Hall's Boathouse and Goldstream Island in the southern portion of Saanich Inlet.

Fishermen using a spinner and worm near the surface are picking up limits of bluebacks averaging one and a half pounds in Indian Bay as well as along the Bamerton shore. Winter springs up to 13 pounds are showing up from Bamerton to Sheppard Point and to a limited extent in Tod Inlet. For these larger fish, try 160 feet of wire line and planer along with a small Tomie plug or strip.

Both jacks and blues up to four pounds are being boated between the Deep Cove Marker and Moses Point while some larger springs may be found off the southwestern side of Fairfax Point on Moresby Island and along the southern Salt Spring Island shore.

Off Oak Bay, Discovery and Trial Islands are yielding the best return of springs up to 22 pounds. Octopus and super-strip seem to be working best.

Pedder Bay was frozen in for a while and nobody has been getting out — so no report.

Likewise, strike out Becher Bay and Sooke — for lack of effort rather than fish.

Shrimp are being harvested in Sooke Basin but the quantity taken hasn't been nearly as high as last year.

The only bright spot for salt-chuck fishermen up-Island has been Duncan Bay near Campbell River, where mill workers have been landing winter springs while spin-fishing off the wharf after work.

For steelhead, the lower reaches of the Cowichan River have to rate as a top choice this week.

However, anglers working the area with roe and spin-n-glo lures have been picking up an unusual and unwelcome "bonus" — chums.

If the weather pattern continues to get a little warmer, melting snow could bring the Koksilah into fishable condition in a short time.

Low water has plagued efforts in the Port Alberni area although a few steelhead continue to come in from the Somass River.

Further north, both the Puntledge and Campbell Rivers are yielding good catches.

NIBBLES: Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association are reminded of the Frostbite Derby on Sunday. Hours are from dawn until 2 p.m.

Victoria Gun Club will stage the last large turkey shoot of the season Saturday and Sunday at the layout on Metchoin Road. Hours are from 10 a.m. 'til dark. Competitions include trap and skeet shooting as well as lucky circles and lucky wheels.

Some words of wisdom from the 36th annual federal-provincial wildlife conference:

"Despite a very large number of examples to the contrary, some sportsmen's organizations are looked upon as serving little more than their own self-interest. Those which warrant this assessment must be encouraged to broaden their interests and activities to include attention to non-game species and preservation of a high quality of environment. If they are to enjoy a position of respect in the community, a large part of their work must be seen to be in the public interest. At the same time, organized hunters must strive for a better understanding of the ecological basis for wildlife management and research."

Some of the groups hereabouts should take note!

Sanderson Up for Trade?

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia Blazers are reported to be trying to unload their $2.6-million star, Derek Sanderson.

The Blazers of the World Hockey Association however, have denied that Sanderson was on the market.

Sports columnist Jim Barniak said the Blazers will deal Sanderson as soon as legal technicalities can be worked out. He lists New York Raiders as a possible party to a deal.

Sports director Ken Nicholson of Winnipeg radio station CJOB, in Philadelphia with the Jets, said that Sanderson does not like the city and wants to get out. Nicholson claims the Raiders and New England Whalers are interested in the former National Hockey League star but may not be able to afford his contract.

Blazers owner Bernie Brown has called in WHA president Gary Davidson to see what can be done about relocating the 25-year-old penalty-killing specialist and working out a settlement of the $2.6 million contract Sanderson signed.

Sanderson has played little for the Blazers. He has been sidelined a month with a back injury and probably will not get back into the lineup for at least another week.

John McKenzie, who left the Boston Bruins with Sanderson to accept big money offered by the Blazers, said he knew nothing of any effort to deal Sanderson.

"I had a major conference with Mr. Brown today," playing-coach McKenzie said Thursday, "and no mention was made of trading Derek."

"We did talk about Derek's medical condition, and agreed he should not play again for another five or six days. We don't want him back too early and then get hurt again and lose him for the season."

McKenzie laughed at the suggestion Sanderson would go to the Raiders. He asked where the New York club, which does not have an owner at present, would get the money.

Barniak said that Sanderson's multi-million dollar contract was the source of the dispute that broke up the partnership of Brown and lawyer James Cooper.

Brown felt they paid too much money for the one-time Bruin ace. Now that he is the sole owner, the thinking is that Sanderson's days are numbered.

Barniak writes that Sanderson's publicity and gate appeal for the Blazers have fizzled.

"Derek has captured Philadelphia with all the pizzazz of a cup of yesterday's ice water," Barniak said.

Nicolson said Sanderson told him he wants out and it may involve going back to the Bruins. The centre told Nicolson the new owners of the Bruins are presently making a "big pitch" to Sanderson and Cleveland Crusader goal-keeper Gerry Cheevers, also a former Bruin.

Sharks Fall Victim To Whaler Accuracy

By The Canadian Press

New England Whalers used a minimum of effort Thursday night in subduing Los Angeles Sharks 5-2 to pad their lead atop the World Hockey Association's Eastern Division.

The Whalers made the most of 13 shots on goal in the game to end the Sharks' win streak at six games and leave them third in the west, just two points behind Minnesota Fighting Saints and 10 behind Winnipeg Jets, idle Thursday night.

Elsewhere Thursday, Minnesota trimmed Chicago Cougars 6-3 and New York Raiders edged Ottawa Nationals 4-3.

The Whalers, who lead New York in the East race by five points, scored on two of three shots in the first period and three of seven in the second.

Defenceman Mike McMahon scored twice at Chicago where the Saints nailed Chicago deeper in the Western cellar. The Cougars trail fifth-place Houston by eight points. Bob Jones' goal at 15:05 of the third period broke up a 3-3 game at Ottawa's Civic Centre in front of 1,767 fans as the Raiders took over second place in the east.

Craig Reichmuth, Wayne Rivers and Brian Bradley shared the other New York goals. Raiders' Ron Ward, a 28-goal scorer, was limited to two assists in the game but continued to lead the WHA scoring race with 56 points.

Late Goal By Fritz Caps Nixon Comeback

Ron Fritz came up with a timely late goal Thursday night to lead Victoria Nixon's Trucking to a 5-4 South Island Junior "B" Hockey League victory over Esquimalt A and W at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

His second goal of the game was scored with 95 seconds remaining to break a 4-4 deadlock and cap a three-goal Victoria rally.

Garth Cunningham, Steve Leatham and Larry Hansen were the other Nixon marksmen while John Entzminger (2), Dave Lale and Gordie Brooks scored for Esquimalt.

Victoria Man Yachting's Choice

One of Canadian yachting's biggest honors has been awarded to Dick Sharpe, Victoria's own "backroom boy".

A long-time worker behind the scenes, Dick has been nominated for the Air Canada amateur sports executive-of-the-year award by the Canadian Yachting Association.

Dick has earned his spurs at all levels of C.Y.A. pushing for the mobile sailing schools that do such a great job in our smaller B.C. communities.

He played a large part, even if it didn't make the headlines, in getting Canada's first Olympic sailing medal.

The training and physical fitness program which Dick helped develop in B.C. certainly helped Dave Miller, John Ekels and Paul Cole make Canadian yachting history in this year's Olympics at Kiel.

Those of us who know Dick — and only the rawest rookies have missed the experience — have no compunction in using an old cliché — it couldn't happen to a nicer guy.

Members of the Turkey Head Sailing Association will muster for two more races Sunday off Oak Bay Marina, the first beginning at 10 a.m. and the second at 1:30 p.m.

Several of them joined Royal Victoria Yacht Club sailors last Sunday when 20 keel boats competed in a one-distance race.

QUARRY RETURNING

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Quarry, former ranking heavyweight contender, has ended his brief retirement and will face Randy Neumann of Cliffside Park, N.J., in a 10-round heavyweight bout at Madison Square Garden on Jan. 5.

Dighton's Obsession, Greg Oliver's Sea Fax III, John Malleson's Sunday, Ian Duncan's Kim, Gordie Vickery's Valhalla, Jan Huibers' Sea Spell, Allan Kelly's Greek Fire, Guy Screech's Morgan and Hugh Porter's Errigal.

Boats belonging to the Canoe Bay Sailing Club paced it out in a six-mile off Sidney Sunday. It was a cool one and the wind played tricks for the club's last race before early February. It was blowing northwest at 10 when the race started but by the time the fleet had reached the first mark it had switched to southeast at 15.

Ole Backhaus' Cal 20 Shalom was over-all winner, beating out Will Jensen's Viking 28, Bud Peetz' Sakl, Al Brownlee's Alana, Dick Fisher's Tricky Dick, Peter White's White Squall, John Barker's Crown 23, Russ Gardner's Crown 23, Mike Greenfield's Vega 27 and Alan Dickinson's Lalanga.

Tom Williams, at 12, is the youngest dinghy enthusiast in his family but his performance in last Saturday's frost-biting session at Cadboro Bay proves he has the instinct of a winner.

Like bush pilots, most of the better sailors sail by the seat of their pants, relying on such things as the feel of the wind on their cheeks to help them outcall their competition.

Tom won his first race last Saturday just this way. He had forgotten his stopwatch and was relying on following his father over the start line. This he did, but to his astonishment a freaky shift of wind placed him smack in front of the whole fleet. Peeling off his scarf, mittens and balacava, Tom settled down to business and had lengthened his lead to 100 yards by the time he received his finish gun.

His father, Jim, however, proved experience counts in the long run by placing first in El Toros by the time, the day's racing was ended.

Jim Davis won in Davids, Louise Anstey was first Laser sailor and Doug Gray topped the X class section.

Protesting again gets under way at 1:30 p.m. this Saturday.

Jack Stacey ended up with more silverware than he could handle when the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, held its prizegiving.

His Golden Gull won everything in which she competed in the Sailerette class, including the Pacific Naval Laboratory Trophy, Frank Heaton Trophy, CESA Crew Trophy, Lou Siddon Memorial Trophy and the Weather or Knot Round-Robin Series.

Norm Hellyer's Black Hawk won the Royal Channel Islands Yacht Club Trophy.

Other first-place winners were: Cole Trophy, Lou Belanger's Bebe; Albatross, Fred Douglas's Vertu; Roche Harbor, Ed Haynes' Lotte; Chaplain Gillard Trophy, Bebe; Gear-Buster Trophy, Lotte.

Both A and B series for keel boats were won by Vertu, Bebe placing second in A while, Robin Spear's Iguana was runner-up in B.

Jane Bond, helming Runaway, placed first in racing for women skippers, beating out Pauline Turnham's Barracouta.

Before you buy "The latest, one-button, solid-state, modular-design Color TV" ... have a look at the Original.

The original is Quasar Color TV and they've been working on the idea since 1965. They pioneered the all solid-state idea (when others were using tubes). They pioneered the printed-circuit module (when others were wiring by hand). And two years ago they introduced the first "One-button" 5-function, color tuner (when other sets still boasted four or five controls).

Motorola call it the Quasar System — and there's no mistaking it. Here's what to look for.

1. Solid-state "Mini-Circuits". The incredible thing about them is that they are constantly being improved, made simpler. And each new version fits previous sets.

These solid-state modules do most of the work in a Quasar Color TV. They snap-in, snap-out, can be replaced in minutes — and are inexpensive. And when you eventually replace one, it will be with the newest version of itself.

Motorola has pioneered this retrofit concept. The combination of solid-state reliability with the anticipation of future technology is the heart of the Quasar System.

2. Insta-Matic Color Tuning. One button tunes all five picture controls: color hue, intensity, brightness, contrast and even the automatic fine tuning. So you don't have to be fiddling half the night. Again, Motorola has pioneered it. And it even has a sixth-sense to keep the colors beautiful when you change channels.

3. The Warranty. Motorola and Colortron were first in Victoria to give a full two year parts and labor unconditional guarantee ... This time WE pioneered it.

4. The Works in a Drawer. It pulls out, so our service technician can usually check out a problem right in your home.

When that happens your set doesn't have to go into the repair shop for a week or two. And you save a lot of money and a lot of aggravation. So don't be fooled. Insist on seeing Quasar Color TV at Colortron.

What does the Quasar System all add up to?

A set that will give you a beautiful picture, that you can depend on, for years to come.

Have a look at the Original.

How will you know you're buying the right set?

The set will have the Works in a Drawer. (It's the only one with the works in a Drawer).

Vancouver Policeman Cleared

Vancouver city police constable Brian Honeybourne, centre, is surrounded by fellow officers offering congratulations after he was acquitted Thursday on a charge of criminal negligence in the shooting of Danny Teece, 17, Provincial Court Judge Eric Winch held that Honeybourne was justified in drawing his gun in the course of duty when he thought a fellow officer had been shot. He said there was no doubt the shooting was accidental. Teece was shot as he and four other youths fled from a suspected stolen car police had staked out. Testimony at the preliminary hearing disclosed that one of the four policemen approaching the stake-out car slipped and fell and accidentally discharged his gun. Honeybourne, reacting to that shot, drew his gun which discharged in a hand-to-hand struggle with Teece. The shot killed the youth. Winch said in his ruling he believed the youth would not have been shot but for the accidental firing of Constable Bruce Campbell's gun when he slipped.

b.c. briefs

Bandit Busy

VANCOUVER (CP) — A bandit armed with a handgun robbed a city supermarket of between $500 and $1,000. Police said the robber's description matches that of a man who robbed a supermarket of more than $18,000 Nov. 25.

Evidence Lacking

VANCOUVER (CP) — An RCMP spokesman said an investigation into allegations that members of the RCMP narcotics squad tried to burn down a house in White Rock Nov. 23 has "not uncovered sufficient evidence to substantiate charges." The investigation was made at the request of the Gypsy Wheelers motorcycle club.

MB Layoff

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel spokesman said Thursday that 125 men would be laid off today at the Vancouver pulp and plywood division because of a union refusal to work overtime on weekends. Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America, said the plant had not been fully winterized and the men did not want to work seven days a week.

Damage Suit

VANCOUVER (CP) — A damage suit against the Russian freighter Sergey Yesenin will be heard by the federal court here on Feb. 19.

Damages are claimed in the collision on Aug. 27, 1970 between the freighter and the British Columbia Ferry Queen of Victoria. Three passengers on the ferry were killed in the mishap.

Little Salt

CLOVERDALE (CP) — A spokesman for the British Columbia department of agriculture said Thursday soil damage to farms in the Mud Bay area, flooded by salt water when a dike broke last month, is not as serious as was first expected. He said sodium and salt content in the top six inches of soil was slightly above normal but that beyond that it was not too serious.

Withdraw Services

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Mayor Roy Partridge of Dufferin will meet Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer Monday to discuss the recent decision by the city of Kamloops to withdraw all services to neighboring municipalities. Among other things, the city would stop Dufferin's using the Kamloops sewer system.

$125,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gar-nite Amile, 28, who was paralyzed for life in a car accident last year, was awarded $125,000 by British Columbia Supreme Court J. G. Rutan Thursday. Amile was a pas-

WARD SYSTEM

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor-elect Art Phillips plans for a Vancouver ward system and provincial land in the downtown area will get a favorable reception, the provincial cabinet ministers responsible indicated Thursday.

Works Minister Bill Hartley and Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, in Vancouver with other cabinet ministers to attend a luncheon for civil service employees, said talks will likely be held in Victoria in late January or early February.

Phillips said the top priority for the new city council will be negotiations with the provincial government concerning a provincial skyscraper planned near the downtown courthouse in an attempt "to create something exciting" downtown and more open space.

Lorimer reacted favorably to another TEAM priority — introduction of some form of ward system.

"I'm in favor of it," Lorimer said. "The city is too big for one alderman to know all the problems in all areas."

THESE NEW BEDS LED TO A NIGHTMARE

NEW YORK — Ordering new beds became a nightmare for a housewife. She told a jury Thursday she ordered two beds, wound up with 10 and sprained her finger in the confusion.

Mrs. Ralph Spinner, 63, said she ordered two beds last January, but the store sent her four beds.

BENNY TAKES 'FINAL' BOW

Jack Benny, who is twice 39, is having his "first farewell performance." The emphasis is on first.

"That's a funny title," Benny said, "because everyone from Sarah Bernhardt to Harry Lauder has always had farewell appearances and it's not a farewell appearance. So I openly admit I'm not retiring."

At an age when most men are drawing Social Security, Benny has no thoughts of retirement.

On the day he was interviewed the comedian was busy in his Beverly Hills office going over the script for his television special.

Titled Jack Benny's First Farewell Special it will be seen Thursday, Jan. 18.

Benny said he is a little worried about the future of comedians.

"Those new comedians who make it deserve credit. There's no place for them to learn. No vaudeville, no burlesque. As George Burns says, we had a place where we could be lousy."

"When I was young I could be bad in say, South Bend, Ind. And maybe the next time I played there I wouldn't be so bad. Now they throw you to the wolves, which is television. If you're bad, you're out."

Georgia Governor Going to Jail

people

ATLANTA — Governor Jimmy Carter of Georgia has announced plans to go to prison next month — for one night at the invitation of commissioner Ellis MacDougall of the offender rehabilitation department.

Carter will participate in a "spend a night in prison" plan to get a better look at what goes on behind the bars.

"I think it will be a very interesting experience and will help me better understand the situation," Carter said.

MILWAUKEE — Disorderly conduct charges have been dismissed against comedian George Carlin, whose monologues have been known to include what are considered profane words.

Judge Raymond Gieringer noted in his dismissal ruling that "you don't expect to hear Aesop's Fables or fairy tales" when you listen to Carlin, who was arrested following a performance in which he discussed the seven words in the English language most commonly considered obscene.

YORK, England — The Home Office saw red when it discovered that the city of York had painted its fire engines yellow.

It ordered the city to repaint the trucks red.

City officials say the fire engines were painted yellow to make them more noticeable to pedestrians and motorists.

SACRAMENTO — Governor Ronald Reagan of California, urging renewed pride in "the melting pot process," said Thursday that "Americans" should come first in the description of hyphenated ethnic minorities.

The governor said he "gets a little frustrated" when Americans of Mexican descent introduce themselves as Mexican-Americans.

"We've got to be the other things first — Americans," he proclaimed.

LONDON — Oil billionaire J. Paul Getty, who may be the richest man in the world, celebrated his 80th birthday Thursday night at a lavish party. Getty vowed to live to 100.

President Nixon telephoned congratulations, and the guests included Nixon's daughter Tricia, former king Umberto of Italy and more than 100 other members of the world's elite.

The man who can afford to buy anything showed up with the kind of "trinket" present he said he likes best: a 12-cent lapel-button gift from the daughter of a business associate reading "I am 80."

57 Pounds of Heroin Does Vanishing Act in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty-seven pounds of pure heroin seized in the now famous French Connection case has vanished from a police department evidence vault.

Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy says it was stolen. The heroin, which police said had a street value of $12 million, was confiscated in the 1962 case that served as the basis for the book and later the movie, The French Connection.

Murphy disclosed the disappearance Thursday, called it a "scandal within the department" and blamed the loss on "inadequate" procedures to control confiscated narcotics.

Narcotics officials estimate that 57 pounds of heroin would be enough to supply 5,200 addicts for 100 days.

Murphy said an audit of police evidence begun Nov. 17 showed that, of 73 pounds of heroin originally listed in the property clerk's records, only 63 pounds of powder was in the locked storage area and 10 pounds was missing.

Furthermore, a laboratory analysis of the 63 pounds Dec. 1 showed that about 47 pounds was just white powder, not heroin, the commissioner said, leaving the department with only about 16 pounds from the original 73.

The heroin was officially turned over to the property clerk March 2, 1962. It was temporarily released March 5 and March 30 for use as evidence and later returned.

USED AS DISPLAY

July 23, 1964, it was apparently released to the U.S. treasury department for display and presentation as evidence at U.S. Senate hearings in Washington and returned Aug. 14 of that year.

No other movement of the heroin is recorded until Sept. 29, 1968, when a property clerk's signed receipt indicates that "a detective removed the narcotics for a district attorney." There is no indication it was ever returned.

Murphy added: "At that time, the signature of the detective is suspected to be false. A shield number given on the receipt has never been issued to any member of the service."

The New York Times quotes "well placed police sources" as saying the detective identified on the Sept. 29 receipt committed suicide earlier this year after being questioned by federal investigators about illegal police involvement in the narcotics traffic.

Murphy said administrative procedures for the control of confiscated narcotics would be tightened but said the lack of evidence could hurt the French Connection case, including future prosecutions. Some defendants have been convicted; others await disposition of the charges.

The movie was a fictionalized account of how a French heroin ring was broken by Eddie Egan, a New York detective who now is retired, and his partner, Salvatore Grosso.

Alaska Awarded Inlet

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A judge here has given the state of Alaska clear title to submerged Cook Inlet lands in a dispute with the federal government involving "untold millions."

Judge James Von Der Heydt ruled Thursday — in what has been called an "historic" first — that all of Cook Inlet north of the Cape Douglas-Point Gore line are inland waters of Alaska and not an arm of the ocean.

Ruling in a case that began in May 1967, he said the "sub-surface resources of lower Cook Inlet are vested exclusively in the state of Alaska."

Included in the ruling were the Barren Islands.

15 Men Drown

TAIPEI (Reuter) — Fifteen fishermen were drowned and 59 others reported missing in a storm on Taiwan's southwestern coast Monday night, police said Thursday. Only seven persons were rescued when eight fishing boats capsized in the choppy seas. Three other vessels from a 120-boat fleet were also reported missing.

Health Plans Denied

Health Minister Dennis Cocke has denied a newspaper report which said regional hospital boards in the province will be expanded to cover almost all other health services.

Cocke said Thursday night in Vancouver that it is by no means certain this step will be taken, as was suggested in the report in Thursday's Daily Colonist. The Colonist report quoted a spokesman for a committee Cocke has established under Dr. Richard Foulkes which is undertaking a year-long study of health services in B.C.

"It's only an idea that has come up in discussion," Cocke said.

"This is just one of many alternatives. There are all sorts of discussions on the re-vamping of health service."

The spokesman for the health study committee, who apparently asked not to be named, said a few basic ideas "are coming into focus."

The most important, the spokesman was quoted as saying, was the concept of establishing "umbrella" regional boards, which would administer not only hospitals but other health service facilities as well, including social services, public health and mental health.

Sandringham Strike Discussed

Leading officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees were meeting in Victoria today to discuss the strike against Sandringham Private Hospital.

The strike, 115 weeks old today, is being waged by CUPE's Local 1311 for a first contract. Recent negotiations with the hospital failed to produce an agreement.

Jim Murrie, western region director of CUPE, said the "present situation in regard to negotiations" between Sandringham and the union "will be reviewed."

The two-day meeting of CUPE staff representatives in B.C. is being attended by Gil Levine, national research director, J. F. MacMillan, national director of organization, Pasquale Ingenito, assistant director of organization, and Harry Greene of Vancouver, general vice-president of CUPE and president of the B.C. division.

Pauline Jones, Baby-Snatcher, Pays Her 'Debt'

NEW STATESMAN (Opinion)

Within the next few days Pauline Jones will be coming out of prison, having discharged the debt which a flock of judges, headed by the Lord Chief Justice, calculated that she owed society. It is worth wondering, now that the penalty has been paid, just how much society has benefited from the judgment of those lonely and elderly gentlemen.

Pauline stole a five-month-old girl from a pram parked outside a chemist's shop in Harlow. She had recently aborted the child of her lover, and he had killed her. She had also lost her much-adored mother after nursing her through the terminal miseries of a cancer of the womb. Her father rapidly married his dead wife's sister — a liaison which lasted a full three months — and this is the background to Pauline's baby-snatching.

At the time her mother fell mortally ill Pauline was a student at a teachers' training college run by the Church of Rome. She was given leave to care for her parent. After her mother had died she went back to her tutors, who agreed that it was "all very sad," but advised her to "pull herself together" and to "get on with her work." Her father gave her money and a motor-car.

But what she needed, more than anything else, was love. She thought she had found it with a fellow student teacher who was the father of her aborted child. But once she became pregnant he abandoned her. Perhaps he had tasted her enough, and would have left her in any case.

Stole Denise

But Pauline was not going to let love escape lightly. She stole Denise Weller from her pram. Perhaps with half a mind to persuade her ex-lover that he was now a family man, and must stay with them. Or perhaps simply because she had so much wanted the child she had lost.

The first gambit didn't work. Pauline met her aborted baby's father at Barnet station on the Northern Line, and showed him Denise, and said, "This baby is yours," and he said "All right — so it's mine — so what?" and left. After that Pauline went on mothering Denise in a flat in Hull until the police came.

The Registrar of Births, Marriages and Deaths in Brighton has been given credit for discovering Denise, being astute enough to note that a letter from Pauline Jones, asking for the birth of a baby born to her in Brighton to be registered, didn't correspond with any of the town's recorded births for that particular day. He told the police.

But there was also trouble up in Hull. Pauline Jones had gone to the health centre to collect her orange juice and other welfare benefits. As a result, she received a call from a health visitor, who weighed the child and said: "How old is she?" "Five months," said Pauline. "Nonsense," said the health visitor. "She must be at least eight." But Pauline insisted that the baby was younger, and the puzzled health visitor also passed her suspicions on to the police.

A girl who has befriended Pauline since her trial, and who has had a chance to look into her mind, feels that this futile attempt at deception by a highly intelligent and well-educated girl is only one of several factors suggesting that Pauline was living in a quite unreal world of her own creation.

This friend also believes that at times, at least, Pauline (who had named the baby Julie) had convinced herself that Denise was her own child. She had settled down in the flat in Hull with a friend had found for her, was pleased to have become friendly with several of the neighbors, and was living a very ordinary and apparently contented workaday life — not in the least resembling the existence of furtive and scheming wickedness with which Mr. Justice O'Connor, the trial judge, later credited her.

Borrow Baby

However, she hadn't totally deceived herself and when the police finally arrived she knew what they had come for, and ran to her next-door neighbor, asking if she could borrow the woman's baby to pass it off as her own, so that Denise would not be found and recognized. The Lord Chief Justice made much of this incident during Pauline's appeal, apparently feeling that it provided proof of a cold cunning.

The medical officer at Holloway who had been most concerned with Pauline during the weeks before her appeal wrote a long letter to the court in the course of which he stated that he had come across three closely similar cases of baby-snatching, in which the woman had taken an infant following some damaging personal tragedy, and with the apparent purpose of winning back an estranged husband or lover.

And as a result of his experience he felt he could state categorically that there was not the remotest likelihood of Pauline repeating her folly, because the combination of circumstances which had caused her aberration could never recur — after all, girls have only one mother.

Lord Widgery apparently accepted this assurance, because he said, in reducing Pauline's sentence from three years to 21 months, that the court could not have shown this "measure of mercy" had there been any danger of a second baby-snatch. It therefore follows that her imprisonment could only have been meant to punish, and perhaps deter others.

It has certainly succeeded in its first purpose. She has had no effective treatment for the disturbed mind which led to her crime. In fact, the only medical attention she seems to have received was for some minor defects of hearing and vision, and, for the first few months of her captivity, sedation which kept her in a permanent daze.

When she was transferred to Askham Grange open prison, she wrote in a letter to a friend: "I am off most of my drugs now — the doctor here was amazed at the amount I was on and asked me how I managed to stand up . . ."

Rough Handling

But in addition to a lack of the psychiatric support she so clearly needed, she has suffered a particularly miserable captivity. She has been roughly handled at times by her fellow prisoners. Visitors have seen marks of violence on her body, which have been explained away as being "due to a fall."

Some of the prison staff appear to have gone out of their way to humiliate her. In a letter written last October, she describes what happened when she received a visit from Mrs. Renee Short (who has campaigned valiantly but fruitlessly on her behalf: "Do you know I had to strip naked before I saw Mrs. Short, for a search. I have never had to do this for any visit — she's not a spy, is she?" Some of the prison officers undoubtedly resented the publicity and public sympathy their charge has been receiving. Others have resented her education and quick mind.

At first Pauline reacted to her misery with several suicide attempts — real or pretended. Then she made a brief and futile escape from her open prison. In recent months she has found refuge by voluntarily undergoing solitary confinement in the part of Styal prison known as "Bleak House."

Society's "revenge" on Pauline Jones, the baby snatcher, has been fruitless, stupid and cruel. When she is freed next week she will be less than ever fitted to the task of coming to terms with the harshness of life. But if such follies are not to be repeated in society's name, we should take the task of sentencing out of the hands of elderly legal recluses, who so often show a staggering ignorance of the real world that lies outside their courts and chambers.

Stewardesses Protest 'Insulting' Publicity

NEW YORK (UPI) — The author, said the stewardess, is a "sawed-off, over the hill, leering old man who couldn't win a stewardess in the world with the nonsense he talks about in his book."

The stewardess, said the author, "just goes to prove my thesis that airline stewardesses are a bunch of humorless broads."

Mrs. Joanna Chaplan, organizer of the Stewardess Anti-Defamation Defense League, and Cornelius Wohl, author of How to Make a Good Airline Stewardess, exchanged those tokens of mutual respect earlier this week. It was the first volley in Mrs. Chaplan's drive to get rid of commercials, books and movies which they feel degrade them.

"We are grabbed, pinched, felt and even slapped," Mrs. Judi Lindsey of Stewardesses for Women's Rights told a news conference.

Fear Passengers

Mrs. Lindsey said airlines prevent stewardesses from objecting to the insulting treatment because they fear a passenger might become angry and fly another airline next time.

"We are guilty until proven innocent. We are always wrong and the passenger is always right — no matter what," she said.

The organizations object to "sexist commercials" which invite a passenger to "fly me," or tell him "she'll serve you all the way." "Books that instruct us in How to Make a Good Airline Stewardess and movies that show us the Swinging Stewardesses in glorious X-rated color" are no better, another member said.

Airlines discriminate against stewardesses by imposing physical qualifications, forcing them to share quarters, requiring them to undergo underwear inspections and sometimes refusing to hire married women, Mrs. Lindsey said. She said such requirements are not imposed on men.

Women's Group To Tour China

VANCOUVER (CP) — The UBC centre for continuing education has received permission from the Chinese government to take a 15-member women's group on a three-week visit to China in March, 1973.

The tour will include the cities of Canton, Hangchow, Shanghai, Peking, Schinchiang and Wuhan.

Members of the group will include women from the news media, education, government and social agencies across Canada.

When Blaine Steadman, 7, arrived for his first morning in the Grade 1 and 2 class in George Jay School, his new classmates were surprised to discover he had eyes.

If a person can't see, they thought, surely he must not have eyes like other people. Blaine's eyes give him only a blurred, shadowy picture of George Jay School, where his world, because he is partially blind. He has less than 10 per cent of normal vision, and can see only five feet in front of him.

He began attending a normal public school two weeks ago almost by accident.

Go Away

David and Linda Steadman of 1307 Johnson St. — Blaine's parents — had been told that in January Blaine would have to be sent to Jericho Hill School, the provincial school for the blind and deaf in Vancouver.

His stay would be at least five years, they were told, with visits home every second weekend.

"We'd have had to move over there," said Steadman. "I won't split up my family."

Mrs. Steadman mentioned her reluctance to send her son away to Jim Ellis, principal of George Jay School, where his twin sister Melody is in Grade 2.

"He registered him the next day," she said.

"When a parent requests, you have to try to work something out," said Ellis. He had never had a blind child in his 850-pupil school, but he talked it over with Walter Kitley, principal of Blaine's former school in the G. R. Peakes Clinic for Handicapped Children, and they agreed it was worth a try.

"The trend today is to get them into normal surroundings," said Ellis, "because they're going to have to live in it."

A lot of teaching today is oral, especially in elementary grades, he said, so Blaine isn't hindered in these areas. And just learning how to get along with his sighted classmates is important social learning for him, he added.

"I'm feeling my way along as best I can," said Lynda Raine, Blaine's new teacher. His capabilities are still being assessed by a learning assistance teacher, but Mrs. Raine already finds him bright and intensely curious about his new world.

Learns Much

"He learns a lot by what he hears," said Mrs. Raine. Things like the school's public address system are objects of great fascination for him.

The students have completely accepted the fact that Blaine can't see, and sometimes want to do too much for him, she said. He has trouble hanging up his coat, and for a while his classmates were so eager to help they wouldn't let him try himself.

At their parents' request, Blaine and his twin, Melody, are in separate classrooms. But Melody walks with him to and from school, and picks him up for recess and lunchtime.

No one can be sure whether Blaine can make it in a public school, although a few other blind children have in the past.

His last teacher at the Peakes Clinic school had said in his report card: "I feel he should now learn Braille to enable him to really get ahead in all subjects."

Blaine can't learn Braille in George Jay School, but his new teachers and his parents are hoping he can get along without it, with the help of new teaching methods.

Lack Humor

"I don't need that kind of stuff," he said. "These stewardesses are flying mini-minds and they have a typical lack of humor. All they are, are dumb chicks who had trouble in high school."

"Mr. Wohl is a heavy-breathing male chauvinist who misleads anyone who reads his book into thinking every airline stewardess is a brainless, whorish sexpot," said Mrs. Chaplan.

"I have never in my life encountered such an arrogant, humorless person as Mrs. Chaplan," Wohl said. "She just goes to prove my thesis that airline stewardesses are a bunch of humorless broads . . . the stewardesses to whom I refer in my book are nice, normal girls, who enjoy life, including sex. ## Little 'Cat Psychology'—And They Come to Her

SEATTLE (AP) — Neither rain, nor snow, nor wind, nor cold, nor height of trees and telephone poles stops Jean McKinstry from her appointed rounds.

Ms. McKinstry, 60, is not a mailman. For the past 2½ years, she's been rescuing pets from high places.

Equipped with jingling spurs and an assortment of safety lanyards on her belt, she answers emergency calls for Progressive Animal Welfare Society Inc. (PAWS). Onward and upward she goes until the wayward creature is caught, placed in a sack and safely lowered to earth.

She draws the line, however, at monkeys and birds.

"You get up one tree, and the monkey has swung to another one," she explained. "And I told the woman who wanted me to rescue her bird, 'sorry, but I don't have wings.'"

Ms. McKinstry says the usual problem is a cat that goes up a tree and won't come down. She talks in a soothing voice on her way up — "cat psychology, really" — and usually they come to her.

PAWS is a volunteer group and pays her no salary, so Ms. McKinstry is happy to receive a $10 gift after one of her rescues. Hot tea or coffee on a cold day also is appreciated.

High climbing is a matter of conquering fear and then putting faith in one's equipment, Ms. McKinstry says.

"I actually get a kick out of it. I also get a chuckle out of the looks when people open the door and see a fat old bat of 60. That really gets 'em."

Ms. McKinstry says she was "as cowardly as the next person" before she learned welding and got a job working on high scaffolds at a Bremerton, Wash., shipyard during the Second World War. Going up a tree is as natural as breathing, Ms. McKinstry says.

Something for Everybody

ROME (UPI) — Something for that friend who thought he owned everything.

Newspapers suggested Thursday Romans might give each other a used city bus or a fake Molotov cocktail or a motorcycle-shaped bed.

An old bus on the Rome transportation company is for sale at a scrap yard for $339 or $508, depending on whether the customer wants it with or without the engine. Repainting it in mod colors costs another $169.

But the newspaper Il Messaggero suggested the buyer leave it the way it is — he might drive through Rome using the special lanes reserved exclusively for public transport.

The motorcycle-shaped bed, complete with lights, handlebar and artificial vibrations, goes for $288. Fake Molotov cocktails, for anyone wanting to play revolutionary, are on sale for $3.39.

Other gift suggestions included:

A piggy bank shaped like a foot of the crucified Christ, with a slot for coins in through the wound, for $5.08.

A dentist's or barber's chair for use in furnishing the living room, for $508 to $847.

CHRISTMAS—FOR CHILDREN

OTTAWA (CP) — He stole the scene last Christmas, and the parents of Justin Trudeau have given him centre stage again this year — at least on their Christmas cards.

There he sits, a bald-headed gnome of a boy, perched on a brown couch with one shoe on and one shoe off and grinning fit to bust.

Opposite the picture — which was taken by his mother Margaret, the prime minister's wife — is the inscription: The First Noel.

Which seems fitting, it being his first birthday on Christmas Day.

The "Christmas is for children" message is implicit as well in the cards of Gov.-Gen. and Mrs. Roland Michener. In a brightly-colored photograph taken last summer in Bella Bella, B.C., by Rod MacIvor, the Micheners smilingly accept a bouquet of carnations from a tiny Indian girl.

The girl, decked out in native dress and crowned with a tall feather, bites her lower lip and looks up at Mr. Michener, her hand in his.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield is sending two different kinds of cards, each painted by mentally retarded children in his home town of Halifax.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis has selected a blue-tinted picture of Parliament Hill done in pen and ink for those on his Christmas card list.

SIDS Rate in B.C. Pretty High: Doctor

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) was discussed by international researchers on the fetus and newborn babies during a closed seminar on developmental biology earlier this week.

SIDS, in which babies usually under three months old suddenly die in their cribs for no apparent reason, has baffled the medical profession throughout the world.

Seminar co-chairman, Dr. Sydney Segal of the pediatric department of the University of British Columbia said in an interview later that three in 1,000 babies born in Canada are likely to die of SIDS.

"I don't know what the exact rate is in B.C., but it is pretty high," he said. "So far there's been no explanation. It may be caused by a developmental peculiarity."

He said Dr. Geoffrey Dawes of Oxford University told seminar delegates that when pure water or surgery water is placed on the larynx of lambs after birth there's a reflex action that stops the breathing. But it doesn't happen with a water and salt solution.

"It shows that some taste receptors at the back of the tongue may do this reaction," Dr. Segal said. "We don't know if this could be a cause of SIDS but it gives us a line for research. It's one of the unexpected results."

Dr. Segal said another possibility discussed was the effects created when the brain's sleep pattern as detected by rapid eye movement (REM) is out of phase with automatic impulse centres controlling breathing and heart action.

Shipboard Love With Difference

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The one-day shakedown cruise of the first U.S. Navy ship with female crew members has shown that women can do the work, romance is harder to suppress than salty language and seasickness knows no sex line.

When the hospital ship Sanctuary pulled into port this week, there was the usual scramble down the gangplank by leave-bound sailors. But beneath some of the foul-weather gear and dungarees were 40 women who made naval history by assuming posts alongside the vessel's 480 male crew members.

They are part of a naval pilot program to evaluate the use of women in non-combat sea duty, including work as deck hands, cooks, barbers, clerks and even deck officers. "The women do their share," said Walter Markword, who works with four women in the galley. "They want equality, so we give it to 'em. We've got one girl that can lift 50-pound potato sacks — no sweat."

Even on the deck, where the routine includes swabbing decks, hauling lines and removing cargo, eight women have by choice taken their place among the so-called "deck apes."

However, most women found their way to indoor deck jobs or hospital corps posts.

"It's not really equality," said Marilyn Tanney, who did deck work before working in the ship's laundry.

"The men try to see how much you can take when you're lifting heavy things. There's no way the women can lift as much."

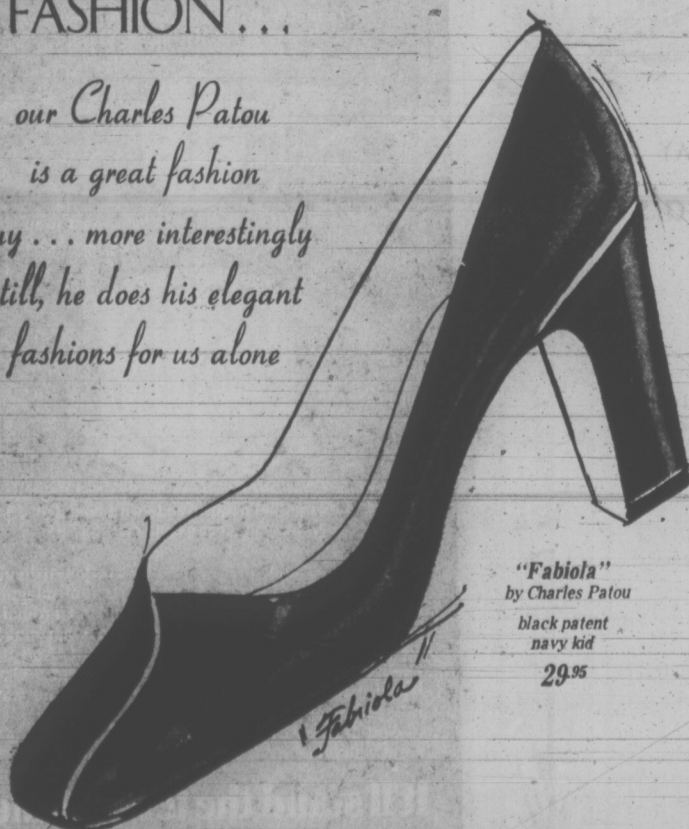

Many women, such as Lisa Tigar, of Oxford, N.Y., say their duties come first and friendship will be the extent of their relationship with male counterparts.

But Deana Texler, 24, a hospital corpswoman, said:

"We date on ship and have had several shipboard romances. A few girls even have gone through more than one guy."

Cancer-Virus Link?

WASHINGTON (AP) — United States government cancer experts plan to investigate a reported virus link to cancer in findings that Dr. Albert Sabin, famed for developing the live-virus polio vaccine, calls "too good to be true."

Dr. Sabin and Dr. Giulio Tarro of Naples, Italy, have evidence that the herpes virus, the kind that causes cold sores, "may indeed be found to be involved in the cause of a whole group of human cancers while having nothing to do with other human cancers," Dr. Sabin said while on a visit to Rio de Janeiro.

The National Cancer Institute this week announced plans to evaluate the findings, and said Dr. Tarro is being invited to come to the United States to assist in the evaluation.

Stick to Girls

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and have two children, seven and five. I married the first time when I was 14. I grew up fast because I had to. My first husband I divorced two years ago because he found somebody else. He married her the day after our divorce was final.

I was hurt and swore I'd never marry again, and I would use men like they did women. I dated a lot, and then I met John. He's 15 years older than I, and in the Air Force. We fell in love and got married in three months. Two months later he got orders to go overseas for a whole year.

John trusts me and I'd never do anything to hurt him. I got all the men out of my system before I married him. John said before he left I should go out with the girls and have a good time, that he didn't expect me to stay home for a whole year.

When I got off work yesterday I asked my mother if she'd sit with my kids so I could go to the N.C.O. Club on the base for a while. All hell broke loose! She said she wouldn't sit with my kids while I ran around on my husband. Abby, I don't consider this "running around." I just need male companionship—a few drinks, a dance or two and some conversation or I'll go nuts. I work five days a week and am saving my money so John and I will have something when he gets home.

Please give me your thoughts on this matter. —Lonely

DEAR LONELY: Married women who "seek male companionship" for drinks, dancing and conversation are asking for trouble. Why tempt fate? Keep busy with the girls until Johnny comes marching home.

DEAR ABBY: When someone carries a cake, pie, salad or something like that to my home, I never return the pan or bowl it came in empty. My mother taught me that.

Well, yesterday my sister-in-law dropped off a collection of my pots, pans, and bowls she'd had at her house for over a year. They weren't empty, either. And do you know what she had in them? A bill for storage!

Was this supposed to be funny?—Not Laughing
DEAR NOT: I hope so.

WILLING TO SWAP ONE DOG FOR CAR

TORONTO (CP) — John and Diane Hopkins have a great Dane but figure the upkeep on a small car is less. So an advertisement in The Star today advises they are willing to swap the dog for a sports car "in reasonable condition."

"He's too big, he eats too much, and we can't afford to keep him," Mrs. Hopkins, 21, explains.

Not only does Joker eat six cans of dog food plus a big helping of macaroni daily, but he raids the plates of Fang, a Labrador, and Sylvester, the family cat.

Mr. Hopkins, a free-lance drummer, bought him as a pup "on the spur of the moment." Now at 19 months he stands three feet high and weighs 120 pounds.

The sales manager of an automobile dealership here, Gord Coates, Thursday offered a 1970 sports coupe valued at $650 for the dog.

He said his staff talked him into the swap.

"We had a dog around the office last winter and the guys thought it would be a great idea. The dog will stay in the office."

No Stamp Ads

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — The government will stop printing commercial advertisements on the borders of sheets of postage stamps because public reaction to the practice has been unfavorable, a post office spokesman said.

Lesson in Childbirth

TORONTO (CP) — Joli Grant, a 12-year-old East York girl is especially proud of her new sister, Samantha Mary, because she assisted in delivery of the baby.

The operation was performed this week by former nurse Sheila Murray — a neighbor of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Grant — in the living room of the Grant residence. The mother said Samantha Mary's arrival was "so unexpected" because she is usually in labor 12 to 16 hours.

The 6-pound, 7-ounce baby is Mrs. Grant's sixth child.

Joli, a Grade 7 student, tied the umbilical cord with a shoelace on instructions from Mrs. Murray while her younger brothers and sisters peeked from the kitchen.

Mrs. Grant said it was "quite a lesson in childbirth" for all the children.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Sat., Dec. 16, 1972

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent is on security, personal possessions, values and home affairs. You can make profitable contacts. You can collect and save; and will make general gain, possibly through one born under Cancer.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Cycle high; judgment, intuition are on target. Adhere to principles. Stick to individual style. Make new starts. Accept challenges. Set your own pace. Be a self-starter. Emphasize personal life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis is on what occurs behind the scenes. You may be dealing with officials of hospital, institution, special organization. Be aware of subtle nuances. Discretion is necessary. Maintain low profile.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent now is on how to turn wishes into realities. Key is to agree to creative changes in challenges.

Get out of emotional rut. Friend is willing to aid. Gemini, Virgo individuals figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on achievement. Outline goal. Take direct path. Go to source. Don't dally with middlemen. You have much to offer and powers that be are well aware of your potential. Act in direct, confident manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides with journey, correspondence, communication with one of a distance. Crystallize philosophy. Find out where you want to go — and why. Seek answers within.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your concern with what could be termed the "unknown" comes surging to forefront. You delve deep for answers. In so doing, you make discovery about individual who means much to you. Relationship is put to test.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Play waiting game. Accent is on legal loopholes. Key now is to find new ways of achieving goal. Marriage, joint efforts — these also are spotlighted. Let others show their hands. Be a keen, shrewd observer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Maintain poise. Stick to what you know. Aquarius could play key role. Accent is on service, work, general health. Get together with one who shares your interests and problems. Make conciliatory gesture.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect now coincides with special relationship, creative endeavor, dealings with young persons. Social activity accelerates. Be ready for change, possible travel and variety of experiences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What you previously took for granted needs checking. Act accordingly. Be aware of details. Be willing to make revisions. Thoroughness now is a key to success. Obstacle should be regarded as healthy challenge.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Accent on relations with neighbors, short trips, special messages and calls. Gains are indicated through written word. You perceive and learn. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. Refine techniques.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are serious, dedicated, analytical. Basic change this month benefits. In 1973, you will travel, find greater means of expressing abilities, talents. Emotional bruise is healing. Know it and be grateful.

Most Canadians have a totally wrong image of a native population. To rectify this lamentable situation, a wide selection of excellent films is available which you can borrow for the next meeting of your club or association. School teachers will find these films especially helpful.

The bilingual catalogue Films on the Indian people of Canada points out that the films listed reveal the Indian people as they really are and highlight the culture of this unique group of Canadians.

Two popular films available in both English and French deal with the game of lacrosse. Another film in both languages, Attiuk portrays the nomadic life of the Montagnais tribe. Klee Wyck tells the story of the famous westcoast painter Emily Carr and High Steel deals with the Mohawk Indians near Montreal who are renowned for their skill in erecting steel frames on skyscrapers.

The other films listed in the catalogue are equally interesting. All films are available through your municipal library or the National Film Board Library in your area. The addresses are in the catalogue.

Canada's Penitentiary System a Mess: Howard

OTTAWA (CP) — A British Columbia New Democrat MP, Frank Howard, says Canada's penitentiary system is a mess and rehabilitation is only a paper program in the system. Howard, MP for Skeena, advocated a more liberal system for young and first-offenders and a tough regime for the old lags who return to prison time after time.

Mr. Howard was speaking out about the penitentiary system after some years of relative silence following his disclosure that he had a criminal record.

He announced in 1967 that he had received a blackmail demand for $5,000. If he did not pay, the blackmail would disclose that the MP had spent two years in British Columbia penitentiary as a youth.

Mr. Howard chose to disclose the information himself. He then restricted his public statements about penitentiary matters, participating instead in an NDP caucus committee on the solicitor-general's department.

PAST MATTER
Mr. Howard refused to discuss the blackmail incident or prison sentence in an interview Thursday, saying it was a matter of the past.

But he did say because of his continuing interest, he had decided to become more vocal about the penitentiary service, drawing in part from a large file of letters from prisoners.

In that regard he released a form letter Wednesday in which he invited prisoners to write directly to the new solicitor-general, Warren Allmand.

"I'm sure he will want to do the right thing and clean up the mess that our penitentiary system is in," the letter said in part.

Asked what he meant by a mess, he said in the interview there have been riots and disturbances in the prison system and a massive escape from the modern Millhaven maximum security establishment near Kingston, Ont.

"If that's not a mess I don't know what is."

He also said there is a morale problem in the penitentiaries because of the leave system.

Mr. Howard said that despite former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer being under heavy criticism over the penitentiaries service, he actually did little.

The controversial practice of giving leaves to prisoners was in existence before Mr. Goyer took office, as were other reforms.

He said Mr. Goyer left the service as he found it, with a rehabilitation service that was a joke and a primary purpose of locking up persons.

"Rehabilitation is a paper program to a large extent. Anytime there is a choice between rehabilitation and custody, custody prevails."

STRIKE HURT

He said because of a sit-down strike by prisoners at the Joyceville institution at Kingston, "whatever rehabilitation there was stopped" and some prisoners were put in segregation.

"The more severe the conflict the more severe the custodial response," he said of the whole service.

Under the present system of granting leaves, a prisoner in one cell may be permitted to go home for the weekend while the man in the next cell would have a request for leave denied, perhaps for some infraction of prison rules.

This resulted in charges of discrimination and affected morale.

The morale of the staff, meanwhile, probably was lowered as much as anything because of the frustrations of collective bargaining.

Mr. Howard said he is a strong supporter of the leave system. But liberalism should be denied for those who return to prison time after time.

He believed that young and first offenders should get the benefit of every rehabilitation program available and should spend most of their time out of prison.

But they should also be told that if they persist in their criminal ways a tough and rigid prison awaits them.

Those who kept returning to prison should be put to socially valuable work and he could see nothing wrong with having that work done in the Arctic where escape would be impractical.

He didn't want to give the impression that he advocated a Canadian Siberia. But he thought this kind of system would be better than institutions such as the Mountain Prison in British Columbia where elderly convicts planned their next caper while serving sentences.

This prison was like an old folks home.

National Defence System Said Immoral, Obsolete, Unsound

Canada's present defence posture is immoral, obsolete, ineffective and economically unsound, says a world affairs authority who advocates the dismantling of regional alliances in favor of a world body "capable of preserving law and order among the nations" of the globe.

Charles Burchill, now retired from the economics and history faculties at Royal Roads Military College offered his critique of Canada's defence program during the first session of an international affairs discussion group, held Thursday evening at South Park School.

Burchill, one of this country's prime movers in the World Federalist organization and a vociferous critic of the war ethic, told the group the structure of the defence alliance which has grown between this country and the United States is detrimental to Canada's welfare.

The North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) is merely the vestigial remains of an era when manned bomber warfare between the Soviet bloc and the North American bloc was a conceivable threat, he said.

But that era is long past and "from a strategic point of view there doesn't seem to be much to be gained by renewing the agreement."

The agreement for continuation of Canada's NORAD commitments expires in May of 1973, after 15 years, and Burchill says renewal would be against the interests of Canada.

"If NORAD is continued after next May, its continuance will not reflect any strategic purpose," Prof. Burchill says, "and it will have to be justified on other grounds."

"The bomber (which NORAD was originally conceived to protect against, is still a very destructive weapon against an earthbound enemy, as in Vietnam; just as a crossbow would still be a very effective weapon against an enemy armed only with spears. But neither the crossbow nor the bomber have any significant role in a war between the superpowers of today."

From an economic viewpoint as well, he contends, the Canada-U.S. defence sharing agreement hurts this country.

"The question of financing the NORAD system was disposed of by a subsidiary agreement known as the Defence-Sharing Agreement which recognizes the desirability of balancing the purchases of the U.S. and Canada from each other, so that no serious unbalancing of the foreign exchange requirements of either country will arise as a result of defence spending," he explained.

This, he said, has had a two-fold effect on the Canadian economy. First, we are forced into the purchase of defence material from the U.S. that we neither need nor want, to maintain the balance-of-payments terms of the pact.

And second, the Canadian armaments industry, incapable of supporting itself, has been artificially maintained.

"Canada would be better off to let that industry die a natural death," he said.

This won't happen, however, as long as the Canada-U.S. defence structure is allowed to continue.

"Leaving aside the moral implications of the arms trade, and ignoring the repugnance we feel when we find Canadian products being used to kill Vietnamese or Angolan non-combatants in their own villages," Burchill says, "the economic wisdom of keeping alive a Canadian arms industry is open to question."

"It imposes a structural distortion on the Canadian economy and the men and materials so misemployed ought to be redirected to the production of goods and services needed in Canada."

However, he is quick to point out, the arms industry employs between 13,000 and 15,000 people regularly, and at times this figure rises to as high as 110,000. Therefore, powerful political forces are at work to ensure the survival of Canadian weapons manufacture.

"This creates a very powerful vested interest in Canada in favor of the continuance of the defence sharing agreements and consequently in favor of the renewal of the NORAD agreement," he says, "if its termination might lead to the cancellation of the defence sharing agreements."

Canada's participation or withdrawal from NORAD, however, will have little to do with the future of the arms pact, he contends.

"The way in which the whole NORAD apparatus has been allowed to run down is an indication that it now has a very low priority in American strategic thinking. Whether Canada withdraws from NORAD or not, the fate of the defence sharing agreement will depend on calculations of advantage based on entirely separate considerations."

Burchill also questions the political desirability of such international defence pacts as NORAD. That, he said, "depends on how one views the future of Canada."

One view, he said, is the "continentalist" approach. If Canada is part of the North American continent, that view maintains, it must also be part of the political union of that continent.

"In this view, NORAD is part of the wave of the future. American armed forces stationed on Canadian soil; Canadian armed forces operating in Canada under American command and relying on weapons coming predominantly from American suppliers," he says. "From this point of view these are all welcome evidence of our growing continentalism."

Burchill is not a continentalist.

"Those of us who reject a narrow continentalism are increasingly supplementing our local, provincial and national loyalties with a kind of world loyalty — a commitment to humanity wherever it may be found, and to the whole planet earth, rather than to one particular continent."

"From this point of view, the basic purpose of NORAD — to preserve the ability of SAC (Strategic Air Command) to destroy any country and people on earth — seems totally repugnant. The fact that improved techniques of destruction have made both NORAD and SAC obsolete does not alter this judgment."

Bylaw Defeat Rapped

DUNCAN — The defeat of a subdivision bylaw for Mill Bay by the Cowichan Valley Regional Board Wednesday evening was a "misuse of the democratic process," said Gerald Patterson, chairman of the area's advisory planning commission.

Although the majority of Mill Bay residents are in favor of the bylaw, which was to put a temporary freeze on subdivisions until zoning could be introduced, directors defeated it by a narrow margin when it came up for final reading. They felt that people who have made provisions to develop land in the area would be hurt.

The defeat of the bylaw forces the APC to start all over again if they still want regulations brought in.

Patterson said Thursday that he and his committee had threatened to resign en masse after the defeat of the bylaw they have worked on so hard since June. He said they reconsidered later because "the majority of Mill Bay residents are in favor of the bylaw and we feel we should continue on their behalf."

Patterson said his committee "was disgusted at the misuse of the democratic process" when the bylaw was vetoed.

"A minority pressure group from the area exerted considerable pressure in order to achieve this end," he said.

Chairman of the board's planning committee Trevor Daniels, director for Cowichan Bay, said Thursday that "I think the regional board as it is presently operating is a sick joke. It is a waste of time and a waste of taxpayers' money."

City Plans Fee for Land Contract Processing

In future, developers will be charged by the city of Victoria for preparing and processing land-use contracts.

City council agreed Thursday the fee should be $75 for the first 50,000 square feet of the proposed development, plus $1 for each additional 1,000 square feet.

On formally submitting his proposal, an applicant must deposit a minimum $75. If the application to enter into a land-use contract doesn't proceed to the public hearing stage the city will refund $50 of the deposit.

Just two weeks after the B.C. Appeal Court ruled that Victoria city council improperly rezoned property in James Bay, council Thursday reopened the procedure to rezone it again.

First readings were given to a bylaw rezoning property at Menzies and Simcoe from high-rise to commercial, and council decided to hold a public hearing on the matter Dec. 28.

But the move was protested by Ald. Harold Olafson, who urged council repeatedly to appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada, or even to use the double approach of appealing and reopening zoning procedures.

"I would like to see justice done, not the law," said Olafson. "It's time the municipalities attacked the courts for some of their rulings on decisions councils have made."

The property in question, owned by Yennadon Holdings Ltd., is across the street from land owned by developer J. A. Mace and proposed for the Bay Village apartment-shopping complex.

Mace fought the rezoning decision in the courts, substantially on a technicality. Initially the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that the irregularity in the rezoning process was insufficient to invalidate the zoning change, but later the bylaw was quashed for illegality by the B.C. Appeal Court in a two-to-one decision.

Establishment of the shopping centre proposed by Yennadon would mean nearby commercial competition for the Mace development.

In a letter submitted to Thursday's council meeting, Yennadon's solicitors pointed out that the bylaw was quashed on a "technical procedural point."

Acting on the rezoning decision, it said, Yennadon has spent $225,000 in acquiring the property itself, while the Bank of Montreal has spent over $100,000 renovating its premises on the site.

In addition, Yennadon had committed itself, under contract with the bank to demolish existing buildings and rebuild on the property by Jan. 1, 1974.

Olafson, in urging the appeal against the latest court ruling, said there was an important principle involved. Any developer could use the decision "as a reference to attack any council on some zoning matter."

Ald. Percy Frampton said he had little sympathy for Yennadon as the firm had committed itself to large expenditure knowing the bylaw was the subject of litigation.

He pointed out that at the time Mace first decided to go ahead with the Bay Village proposal the property across the street was apartment zoned. The rezoning to commercial use had affected Mace's financing, and Mace felt there was "a moral obligation" involved on council's part.

Mayor Peter Pollen told Frampton he thought it "preposterous" to suggest that exclusivity of zoning should be the basis of any undertaking to finance a development, or that the city should maintain such exclusive zoning to protect what was essentially a monopoly situation.

Council gave first three readings to the bylaw rezoning the Yennadon property to commercial. Final passing of the bylaw will be considered after the Dec. 28 hearing.

Parkland School Opening Marked by Grade Shuffle

A shuffle of intermediate grades at the north end of Saanich Peninsula will take place next September to coincide with the opening of the new Parkland Secondary School.

All Grade 7 students, from Deep Cove, Sansbury, McTavish and Sidney elementary schools will attend the present North Saanich Junior High on McDonald Park Rd. as well as Grade 6 Sidney students.

Grade 8 will continue in North Saanich Junior High, providing what director of instruction for Saanich School District Tom Elwood calls "a better deal for the upper intermediate age group."

The shift will relieve overcrowding at the district's north end where nearly 200 students are being bused daily out of Sidney to neighboring elementary schools which in turn, are becoming too crowded.

Deep Cove, McTavish and Sansbury elementary schools will house Grades 1 to 6, Sidney elementary will accommodate kindergarten and grades one to five.

At Parkland, Grades 9, 10 and 11 will total about 560 students in September. Elwood explains that in order to provide continuity for present Grade 11 students at Claremont who live at the north end, they will continue to be bused to Claremont for their graduating year.

The district is adopting these measures in order to cope with the present population bulge which, even with zero growth, will bring enrollment at Parkland in Sept. 1974 to 800 students.

Projections of school populations are becoming increasingly dicey, says Elwood. It has been predicted that within three years, a nation-wide drop in the number of students entering elementary school will leave classrooms empty.

In the Elk Lake district, an elementary school is short of pupils because the area which was once popular for low-priced family housing, has now become a prestigious district mostly occupied by retired and childless couples.

"We are into a new game with population predictions," added Elwood, mentioning the factors of birth control and abortion.

Saanich School Board approved the establishment of intermediate grades at North Saanich Junior High at a meeting Wednesday.

Trustee Gordon Ewan was the lone objector. The prospect of shifting more students by bus should, he said, be discussed at an open meeting and the decision should not be made by a "lame duck" board, three of whom were retiring from the board this month.

Parents and the public will be invited to discuss the new arrangements at community meetings to be held by board members.

Graves Vs. Hydro

MONTREAL (CP) — Matthew Shanush, chief of the Eastmain Indian settlement on James Bay, told Quebec Superior Court Thursday that members of his tribe hold the bodies of their buried relatives sacred and do not want to see their graves under water.

Shanush, 61, was testifying at a hearing of a request by the native peoples of northern Quebec for an injunction to halt the $6-billion James Bay hydroelectric project.

"I myself have five children and my mother buried along the Eastmain River and at our traplines," the Cree chief said.

Shanush said the James Bay project would have a great effect on his people because the numbers of animals they hunt and trap, and the fish they catch, would be reduced.

The power project would flood 3,300 square miles of land and divert three rivers in the James Bay area. The native peoples contend the act authorizing the plan deprives them of their rights and is unconstitutional.

CHIEF WORRIED

Shanush said he is worried because a document entitled James Bay Development Corp. Initial Phase, produced as evidence in court, provides for work along the Eastmain River.

Billy Diamond, chief of the Rupert House settlement south of the Eastmain settlement, said his tribe is not ready to face development of the area.

Opening of roads to the area would give Canadian residents easy access to the area and, once they had come, they undoubtedly would want to stay and develop the land.

He said his people, who have been in contact only with government representatives and teachers, have not yet solved all their own problems.

The removal of trees will affect the Indians' traditional way of life, thus affecting their culture and pride, Diamond testified.

"We have a great pride in being Indians and living off the land."

Elk Asks Rail Line Permit

OTTAWA (CP) — The Kootenay and Elk Railway Co. requested Thursday an order from the Canadian transport commission clearing away the last obstacles to building a rail line from the rich south-eastern British Columbia coalfields to the United States border.

Lawyers for the railway said the commission has no jurisdiction to hear certain aspects of the case again as all matters were settled in favor of the Kootenay and Elk in rulings by the commission and the Supreme Court of Canada.

W. G. Burke-Robertson, lawyer for the railway, said that if the commission agrees to a Canadian Pacific Railway request for another hearing, the Kootenay and Elk and the U.S. railway, Burlington Northern Inc., would not appear.

The commission said it wants to receive written arguments from CP Rail and other parties, such as the B.C. government, before ruling on the Kootenay and Elk argument.

The commission was hearing views on a CP Rail application for another hearing on whether the Kootenay and Elk could link up with the Burlington Northern at the U.S. border.

The Kootenay and Elk line would be in direct competition with CP Rail in carrying coal from the Kootenay region in B.C. to the west coast.

Auto Makers Ordered To Defend Ad Claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government ordered 12 automobile makers Thursday to back up more than 100 advertising claims ranging from General Motors' statement that steel beams in its Vega are "comparable to highway guardrails" to Volkswagen's claim of superior gas mileage.

American Motors will be asked to substantiate an advertising claim that the Ambassador offers "26 other optional charge."

The Federal Trade Commission said the car makers have days to produce the documentation to support the advertisements. But the commission emphasized that "it is merely gathering information" and it is not filing complaints against the manufacturers, nor is it suggesting that they are guilty of violating federal regulations.

Volkswagen was asked to submit proof that its square-back sedan gets about 24 miles per gallon "and that compared to the average domestic compact car that Volkswagen saves the price of more than 200 gallons of gasoline" in a year's normal driving.

Makers of Volvo, the Swedish-built car, must produce proof of its claim that each one of its steel pillars holding up the car's roof is strong enough to support the weight of the entire car.

The FTC said it wanted Ford to prove its claim that the Pinto's four-speed transmission "never needs lubrication for the life of the car."

Move Protested

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton officials reacted angrily Wednesday to a decision by Pacific Western Airlines to base its newly-acquired Boeing 727 in Calgary.

Objections were registered to an announcement in Vancouver by Don Watson, PWA president. He said later that the temporary shift to Calgary is necessary because the transport ministry won't allow the plane to use the facilities of the industrial airport close to downtown Edmonton.

According to the commission, General Motors' ads which claimed that the steel beams on the side of the Vega "looks and works pretty much like the guardrails you see along a highway."

GM was also told to provide proof that the guard beams in the Vega provide more side impact collision protection than is available in any other economy car comparable to the Vega.

Chrysler was asked to produce proof that its "electronic ignition system never needs retiming."

American Motors was asked to prove that its Gremlin "is heavier, wider and has more horsepower than any car comparable in price."

Other car makers asked to provide documentation of their advertising claims were: British Leyland Motors, Fiat, Renault, Saab, Subaru and Toyota.

GARDENING
hilda beastallMight Be Rewarding
To Read Up on Bamboo

When the frost comes out of the garden soil we shall want to get back to one more planting spree before Christmas.

If you haven't thought of bamboo as having a place in your new garden design, it might be rewarding to read up on them.

You will find most are invasive in their habit, particularly in a moist fertile soil. This is reason enough for not including them in a small garden nor into a mixed bed or border.

However, their graceful airy growth contrasting with the stiff uprightiness of the stems makes the taller bamboos ideal for large tub planting or for setting into squares of soil between patio blocks.

Too much competition from high color and intricate leaf form of other shrubs in close proximity renders bamboos ineffective, but as features on their own against plain wall spaces or other smooth surfaces, bamboos cast an appealing shade pattern.

With their roots confined to tubs, bamboo requires replanting every three years. One 10-inch tubful will then make three plants. The rootballs become quite matted, needing an axe or especially sharp spade for dividing.

This work should be done in spring, just before the new shoots begin to grow. The shoots make all their growth in one season to whatever height they are to attain. In mild winters the leaves remain green until new shoots grow up the following spring and summer. The old withered ones can then be cut away at soil level.

Several species and varieties have been available locally for years. At one time a specialist grower had a collection of 20 or so, all different. Though the collection is gone, some of the plants from it are still around.

Different kinds of bamboos are listed under separate generic names. You will come across Bambusa, Sasa and Arundinaria. They have botanical differences not too easily discerned, so that one's choice will have to be governed by what local growers have proven to be hardy.

Some bamboos have bright green narrow leaves; others are wider and shorter; still others have narrow bands of green and cream; while one has broad green leaves banded with cream.

Heights vary from a foot or so to 15 feet. Bamboos in general need a humus rich soil, shelter from biting winter wind and reflected hot summer sun, and a constant supply of moisture.

With their roots safely confined in tubs or patio squares, the bamboos will get all the moisture needed to make their of exotic drama to your new garden design.

full growth in early summer, thus contributing a full season

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In tournaments and duplicate games, many players do not open the bidding in first or second position with only a four-card major suit. Hence, when they open with one heart or one spade, partner knows that opener has a minimum of five cards in his major suit. Thus, if the bidding becomes competitive, responder can raise opener's major suit with only three cards, since he knows that his partnership possesses a playable trump suit containing at least eight cards.

At times, the refusal to open in a four-card major suit turns out well; at times, it doesn't. Today's deal illustrates this theme.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

NORTH	♠ KJ9532	♥ 6	♦ Q65	♣ AK6
WEST	♠ AQ74	♥ AJ852	♦ KQ974	♣ J1073
	♠ 9842	♥ 1084
SOUTH	♠ 106	♥ 103	♦ AK	♣ QJ97532

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass 1♠ Pass 1NT
2♠ Pass 2♠ Pass
3♠ Pass 4♠ Pass
5♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

The defense was quick and smooth. West opened the king of hearts, which was overtaken by East's ace. East played back the eight of spades, an obvious singleton when one considers dummy's spade holding. West won this lead with his ace, and promptly returned a spade, which East ruffed for the setting trick.

Suppose that West did not belong to the school that believed in opening biddable four-card major suits. In this case, he would have opened the bidding with one heart. In all probability, North would then have arrived at a four-spade contract. Unless East had the clairvoyance to open a club at trick one (which West would ruff), the four-spade contract would almost surely be brought home safely. All declarer would lose would be two trump tricks and one heart.

But with West opening the bidding with one spade, it became virtually impossible for North-South to reach the four-spade contract. North gave it a try with his two-spade bid, but, of course, South didn't know whether this was a cue bid in the opponent's suit or a real spade suit. Perhaps if North had bid spades again (instead of four clubs), South would have known that North had a good spade suit. But even in this (presumed) bidding sequence, it is highly questionable as to whether South would have raised to game in spades with the doubleton 10-6 of spades. And so let's score a triumph for the bidding of four-card major suits.

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"Did you make a note of the serial number?" asked Lucy. "They always want that."

Bert nodded. "Sure, and it's a funny one," he replied. "If you subtract its first part from the square of the last four figures you get it again. That's 120 from the square of 1096 makes 1201096."

One other number works that way with the square of its last four digits. Can you find it?

Optimism Over Delayed Bi-Bi Departures

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government's announcement Thursday of new principles of implementation of bilingualism in government departments drew reaction ranging from enthusiasm to "guarded optimism" from the civil service.

Reaction was stronger, and negative, from opposition political spokesmen, some of whom saw the bilingualism issue as a prime element in the setback of the Liberal government in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Prime Minister Trudeau said the announcement Thursday by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury extending bilingual target dates by the years was not "backtracking." It was intended to add specifics to the program so that civil servants could plan ahead.

Claude Edwards, president of the Public Service Alliance of Canada PSAC, said the clarification of policy "meets practically all our demands. They've used many of the ideas we've proposed all along." The PSAC represents 140,000 of 230,000 public servants.

The Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, which represents 12,500 public servants, received the announcement in a spirit of "guarded optimism."

G. W. Baldwin, Progressive Conservative House leader, labelled the announcement "meaningless" and declared: "The only thing that is clear is that, if the Trudeau government remains in power, Canadians can expect at least five more years of confusion on the subject of bilingualism."

His feelings were echoed by Walter Baker (PC-Grenville-Carleton) Many of whose constituents are public servants.

"It fell far short of the mark," Baker said of Drury's clarification.

The "clarified" policy aims for the designation of nearly 25,000 public service jobs as bilingual by Dec. 31, 1973, and the filling of these jobs by bilingual persons by Dec. 31, 1978.

Drury contests the interpretation that this sets back by three years the attainment of a bilingual public service. It has been announced in 1971 that certain percentages of bilingual persons in various job categories were to be attained by 1975.

Drury said this referred to bilingual persons, whereas the 1978 target is for bilingual jobs.

Now: Son of the Godfather...

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The gangster movie is back with a vengeance.

Paramount is going ahead with Godfather, Part Two, which will carry the Corleone family into the 1960s and Las Vegas. Featured will be those performers who avoided execution in the original film: Al Pacino, Richard Castellano, Robert Duvall.

Francis Ford Coppola, who will again direct and co-author the script with Mario Puzo, had the bright idea to include Marlon Brando in the sequel. This time Brando would be able to play his own age, since the script called for flashbacks of the Mafia Don in his early years of organizing the "family."

Brando's demands may preclude his appearance. He wants $500,000 plus 10 per cent of the gross receipts. For the Godfather he received a small amount of salary and a percentage with a cut-off mark of $1.5 million.

PLAN MAFIA FILMS

Italian producers are planning more Mafia films. One of them is My Brother Anas-tasia, starring Alberto Sordi, and Richard Conte, another of the Godfather alumni.

Organized crime is getting the biggest play from the filmmakers, but they are exploring other areas of the underworld as well. Paramount is filming The Friends of Eddie Coyle, about professional free-lance criminals in Boston. It is based on a novel by George V. Higgins, an assistant U.S. attorney in Massachusetts.

The film stars Robert Mitchum and Peter Boyle.

The gangster trend also covers blacks, with such figures as Shaft and Superfly operating inside and outside of the law.

Gangster movies first came to prominence in the early 1930s with such films as Scar-face, Little Caesar and Public Enemy.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

What Is Bronchiectasis?

Bronchiectasis is a miserable disease in which parts of some of the bronchi (air ducts into the lung) become dilated and full of pus. The original damage may have resulted from a poorly healed pneumonia or a bad attack of whooping cough.

Persons with dilated bronchi are likely occasionally to suffer from a bout of cough and fever when the dilated air ducts become more than usually infected. Years ago, such attacks used to endanger the life of the person, but often today an antibiotic will quiet the infection. Naturally, the person with bronchiectasis must look on any bad cold as a danger signal.

In past years, bronchiectasis sometimes used to be confused with tuberculosis. But today, with the help of an X-ray study, an accurate diagnosis can usually be made.

In cases of severe bronchial enlargement and infection, especially in a lower lobe of the lung, a surgeon may work a cure by taking out the diseased lobe.

A person with a tendency to get bronchiectasis if he smokes cigarettes would be very wise to quit smoking. He can also help himself, with what is called postural drainage, in which the person lies crossways on his stomach on a bed, resting his forearms on the floor, and holding his upper body on a slat so that he can rest his forehead on his arms. This way, the mucus in his lungs can get out more easily, helped by the force of gravity.

A DEVIATED SEPTUM
Everyone has a septum, or dividing partition, between the two cavities of the nose, the nostrils. The septum is made largely of cartilage, a sort of gristle. In many people, this septum, instead of being flat, bends out either to the right or the left, and this naturally can make one nasal channel too narrow for comfortable breathing.

What a nose specialist does is to anesthetize the septum. Then he makes a cut and separates off the mucous membrane lining each side of the septum. Next he takes out the crooked cartilage and puts the two lining membranes together to form a straight, flat septum.

IS A BLOODSHOT EYE DANGEROUS?
Occasionally, an older person will wake in the morning with a bloodshot eye. Usually this is not much of a danger signal, but the person may have high blood pressure, or perhaps a tendency of small arteries here and there in the body to break and let blood run out into the tissues. In most cases, no treatment is indicated or possible.

THESE POLICE GOING CASUAL

BALDWINVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A concept of law enforcement that seeks to remove the military aura from police work is getting one of its first full-scale tests in this suburb of Syracuse.

The Baldwinsville police department, directed by a 32-year-old administrator, is discarding the traditional look to both its uniform and its thinking in favor of the more casual approach.

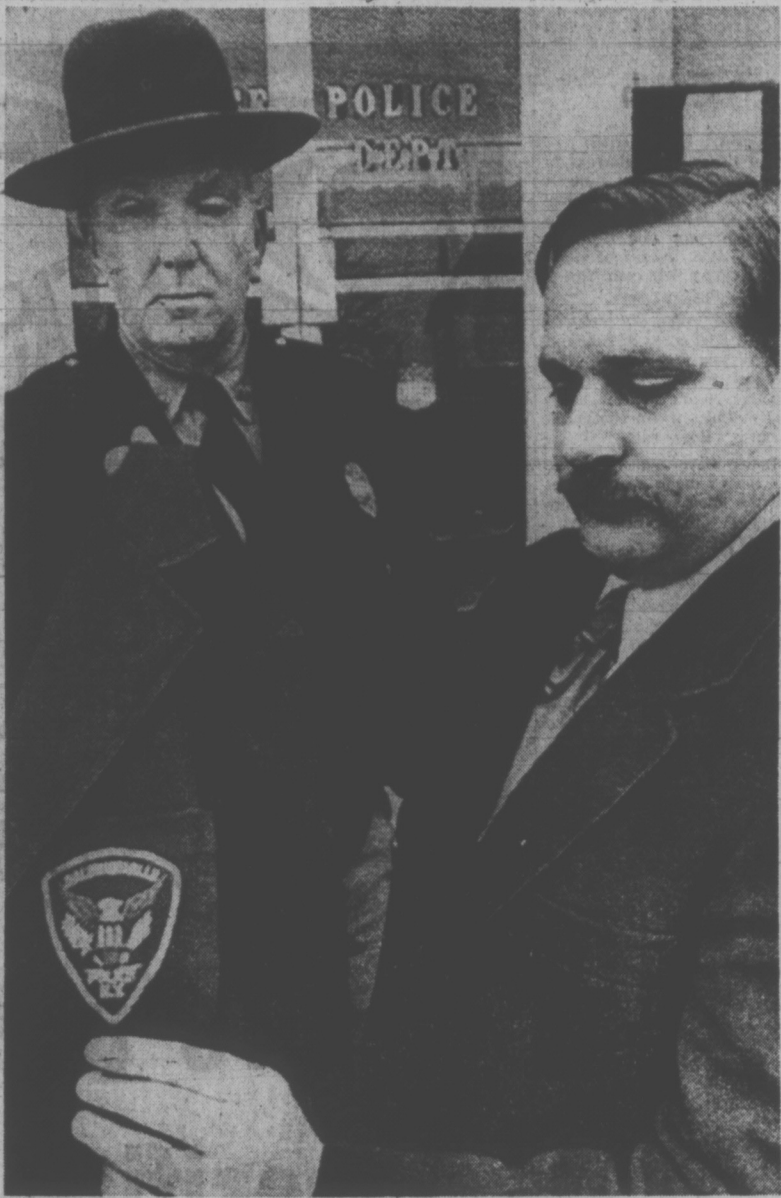

It is also getting its first woman officer: the residents of the village of 6,500 can recall as it builds a police force nearly from scratch.

Patrolmen who formerly wore blue uniforms, a gadget-loaded gunbelt and a silver badge are being outfitted with double-knit blazer-and-slacks combinations, compact firearms and a new title: community service officer.

The detective and supervisory functions will be handled by agents whose only outward sign of authority will be the color of their blazers.

More paramount than the costuming, however, is the emphasis on a way of thinking that seeks to involve the officers in all phases of community life and stresses crime prevention over apprehension.

"It's been called a radical departure, but it's really not," says Police Administrator Douglas W. Stinson. "It's a return to the original concept of public service by police, so I suppose you could call it reactionary if you wanted to label it."

Cost-Sharing Top Priority For Lalonde

By GLENNIS ZILM
OTTAWA (CP) — Marc Lalonde, Canada's new health minister, sees a new federal-provincial cost-sharing agreement as one of his first tasks.

"As you know, on the health side, proposals have been considered over the last year or two concerning a fundamental review of the medicare and hospital insurance schemes," he said in an interview.

"These reviews could end up, if there is an agreement, in a really fundamental change in the whole operation."

"It would lead in effect to... the repeal of the medicare and hospital insurance acts; the replacing of these two with a new act that would allow greater flexibility for the provinces and more room for them to work out their own priorities."

Mr. Lalonde, 43, a freshman MP, was appointed head of the health department less than three weeks ago. But despite this, he approaches the heart of federal-provincial negotiations with confidence.

HAD EXPERIENCE

"In terms of the federal-provincial relations aspect, I suppose the prime minister indeed chose me for this portfolio because of my interest in the field and the experience I had over the years working with Mr. Pearson and Mr. Trudeau in federal-provincial affairs—not only on the constitutional side, but on the operations and administrative side."

Mr. Lalonde referred to his years as policy advisor to former prime minister Lester Pearson in 1967-68 and as principal secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau during the last Parliament.

A lawyer, the former law professor is a firm believer in federalism. And as a French-Canadian, he is expected to take a firm yet realistic approach to Quebec's demands for more control in the health and welfare fields.

He has had informal discussions already with Quebec health and social affairs minister, Claude Castonguay. And today, he was to have informal meeting with Ontario Health Minister Richard Potter in Toronto.

He said he would like to see a full-scale federal-provincial ministers conference in the near future.

CRITERIA SET

Any new health plans would have to meet federal criteria about universal applicability, portability from one province to another, and accessibility by all persons. But Mr. Lalonde said these plans could offer the provinces much more control, especially over which areas of health care other than hospital and doctor payments should receive greater emphasis.

"Our system at the present time has a built-in prejudice for hospital care and doctors care."

The provinces have no incentive to develop new services, because there are no provisions for cost-sharing, he said.

Proposals for revamping the agreement were put forward 13 months ago by former health minister John Munro. They were not greeted with unanimous approval by the provinces.

However, rapidly rising costs have put some pressure on the provinces, Mr. Lalonde said. There was even some pressure from the public for less expensive kinds of health services.

NO DETERRENTS

Mr. Lalonde ruled out a suggestion that deterrent fees might be brought in to limit use of hospital or medical insurance plans.

"Deterrent fees are a kind of regressive tax that hurts the poor or quasi-poor more," he said. "You get all those people who are just above the poverty level that you tax by this—not by income but by use."

Also, high administrative costs of collecting these fees and administering the system are high, he said.

Mr. Lalonde also said he thought his department would take a greater interest in health promotion programs.

"The federal government could provide some national education schemes in several areas, such as improved nutrition and the federal government could and should play a greater role in education."

THEY'RE BIG BOYS NOW

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Thursday it's time people stopped condemning British Columbia's civil servants.

"The civil service is unfairly maligned and that should end," he said at a luncheon for provincial employees.

None of the massive corporations in North America can give the quality of service provided by civil servants in the province, he added.

Barrett said he wouldn't be following the policy of former premier Bennett of announcing wage increases for civil servants at the luncheon, given for government employees with long service.

"You are big enough and tough enough to slug for yourself," he said. "It is the end of paternalism."

He promised government employees that he would give them bargaining rights.

Premier Barrett also presented 213 civil servants from the mainland with certificates of long service.

Major Show For Soviets At CNE '73

TORONTO (CP) — The Soviet Union plans a major exhibit at the 1973 Canadian National Exhibition here.

David Garrick, CNE general manager, said Thursday the USSR wishes to take over the entire 40,000 square feet of display space in the International Building. It also wants an outdoor display area.

The Soviet Union also will be approached to take part in the Canadian international air show and evening grandstand show.

Previous government efforts to have the Russians take part in the air show have failed. But CNE officials think chances for such Soviet involvement next year are brighter.

Food Firm Fined

BURNABY (CP) — Westminster Foods Ltd. was fined $25 in provincial court Thursday after being found guilty of depositing oil in waters frequented by migratory birds. The company was charged after 100 gallons of rapeseed oil spilled into Burnaby Lake in August.

MPs Moving Away From Action Central

By VICTOR MACKIE

Times Ottawa Bureau
OTTAWA — Half a dozen cabinet ministers along with a large number of Liberals, Progressives, Conservatives and Social Credit members of Parliament, will soon move into the Confederation Building making it part of the Parliament Hill complex even though it is off "the hill."

They will have their own private restaurant and cafeteria and other facilities.

MPs having their official office space off The Hill is something that the party whips, excluding the Social Credit, fought against on the grounds that members should be in the Centre Block or near-by in the West Block. They lost the fight.

MPs were attracted by posh office space in the Confederation building, including wall to wall carpeting, teak furniture, separate offices for secretaries and in some cases a private washroom.

Patrick Nowlan (PC — Annapolis Valley) said, "After I inspected the office space offered in the Confederation Block I suffered from claustrophobia." The secretaries to the MPs were delighted with the much larger space provided and urged their bosses to make the move.

The Centre Block houses the Commons chamber "where the action is." Having a large block of MPs in offices detached from parliament hill could increase "absenteeism" and delay the taking of recorded votes in the house when the division bells ring, party whips have argued.

A Volkswagen bus service using five or six vehicles will be operated from the Confederation Building to the Centre Block on a regular basis.

This will enable MPs and ministers located in the Confederation Building to reach the Centre Block as soon as possible. The trip is expected to take 10 or 12 minutes.

The proposal to provide office space for MPs in the Confederation Building was put forward by the public works department. Veteran MPs at first were strongly opposed to the idea.

Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) and NDP house leader, contends that MPs should be located either in the Centre Block or the West or East Blocks of the Parliament buildings. He recommended to the NDP caucus that its members avoid being enticed "off the hill" away from where the "action is."

Dead Trapper's Diary Found

NORDEGG, Alta. (CP) — A 43-year-old trapper whose body was found Thursday kept a diary written on business cards and lost about 60 pounds during his ordeal, searchers reported.

The body of Jerry Kenny of Bowden, Alta., was found one-half mile from his main camp, about 140 miles northwest of Red Deer. He went into the 50-square-mile trapline area Nov. 12 and was never seen alive again.

Kenny weighed 180 pounds when he went into the woods. The 18-man search team said he apparently started many fires and attempted to build a sleigh.

One of the diary notations said "wolves came close to night." RCMP said the diary was a personal possession and did not release other remarks.

Kenny, who trapped in the area for eight years, was wearing light clothing. Searchers reported that it looked like he had not started trapping. His gear, food supply, traps and other equipment were stored at his tent camp beside his half-ton truck.

The body was found after searchers in a helicopter spotted one of Kenny's ponies. The pony, which was pursued by snowmobile, carried a tattered note attached to the saddle that said: "Help, I'm a half-mile west of camp on west side of river." The date on the note was illegible.

Energy Crisis

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta is facing critical decisions regarding energy resources, Premier Peter Lougheed said Wednesday at a meeting of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce.

He told the chamber Alberta had no bargaining power for its energy resources 10 years ago and 10 years from now "we face the real possibility of alternative energy sources."

Lengthy Session

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney announced Thursday the third session of Saskatchewan's 17th legislature will open Thursday, Jan. 25. Blakeney told his weekly news conference this is the earliest start for a session in many years and it is expected that more than 120 bills will be introduced.

He said the session likely will be lengthy in terms of sitting days but the government hopes to cut down on the number of night sittings. This would give MLAs more time for meetings and other evening functions which they often must attend.

Ottawa Sued

CALGARY (CP) — A suit against the federal government was filed in federal court here Wednesday, alleging one of its departments breached its obligations to a now-bankrupt Calgary oil exploration firm and its major shareholder.

The statement of claim by William Elias, major shareholder and president of Cataline Exploration and Development Ltd., names the crown as defendant and cites the department of national revenue, customs and excise division.

He said he has suffered damages as a result of Catalina's bankruptcy.

Indian Hotel Grows

EDMONTON (CP) — The capacity of the first motor hotel owned by an Indian band in Alberta will be doubled in a $385,000 project to be completed next April, the motel's manager said Wednesday.

Keith Murray, manager of the Sawridge Motor Hotel in Slave Lake, said during a visit to Edmonton that the motel will expand to 58 rooms, including two executive suites.

Built and financed by the Sawridge Indian band with aid from the federal department of regional economic expansion, the motel will have cost more than $1 million when the addition is completed next April.

Prisoners Join

WINNIPEG (CP) — Toastmasters International has acquired its first member club from a Canadian penal institution.

The Gavel Club at nearby Stony Mountain penitentiary was notified this week that with the approval of the world organization and the penitentiary administration, it has been accepted into Toastmasters District 64 which includes Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario.

The Gavel Club has about members.

VEIL OF SILENCE OVER JAIL DEATHS

WALPOLE, Mass. (AP) — A tiny elite of vicious convicts at Massachusetts' top security prison run their fellow prisoners' lives and decided who will be fingered for death, federal and state officials say.

There have been 30 slabbings at Walpole state prison and nearby Norfolk prison this year, and 12 men have died.

Topless Gets Nod

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil (Reuter) — Brazil got permission Thursday for its first topless beach but it can be used only by women. A police inspector gave businessman Barcelino Becker permission to use part of the Tramandai Beach near this southern port as a spot where women may legally wear only the bottom part of their bikinis.

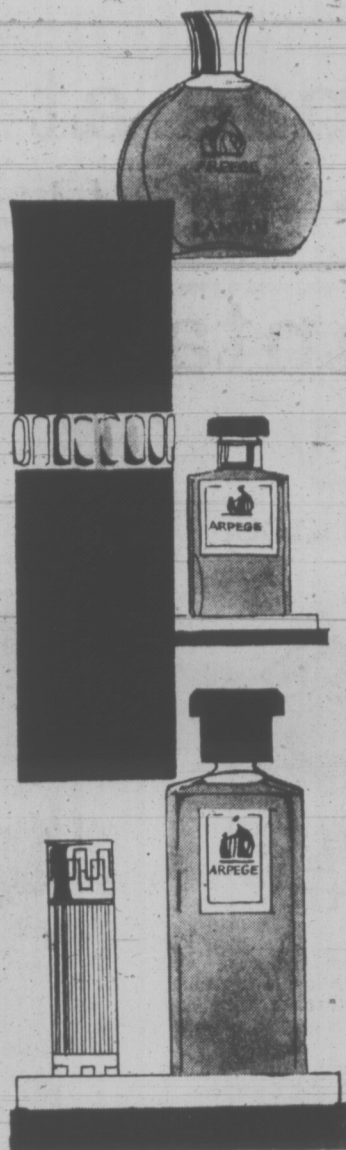

Prisoners refuse to talk to investigators. No charges have been laid in any of the deaths.

Ten men—the strongest mobsters from Boston's underworld—affect all phases of daily life inside Walpole prison, officials say, from flow of contraband to who is executed by stabbings.

The latest victim was Robert Bennett, stabbed 50 times in his prison bunk. Days before his death, Bennett, 22, of Boston, predicted that he would be killed and wrote to his mother: "I did not wrong the person who did this to me."

Successful crackdowns on organized crime have put dozens of Mafioso and other underworld leaders into Walpole prison, says John O. Boone, Massachusetts' commissioner of corrections.

We're sparkling with a special kind of Christmas warmth that makes family shopping a joy

The store is all dressed up in Christmas finery... the windows "alive" with the colors of this happy season. Inside there's a traditional welcome waiting for you... a cheery staff, Christmas "boutiques", Santa himself, and don't forget the "People Tree" where you can help someone less fortunate than you celebrate Christmas.

Santa welcomes the kiddies daily at Eaton's

in Santa's Palace now located on the Main Floor, next to the Fort St. Entrance Santa's Palace is a special world of winter... Jack Frost himself has decorated the Palace with diamond-like wonders, with sparkling lights to dazzle the eye. And snow. Wonderful, white, magical snow that makes the familiar world into a winter wonderland. Come and enjoy it with your children... watch their eyes sparkle as they visit with Santa; capture the moment with a picture if you wish, take in the children's movies. It's just one way we make Christmas come to life at Eaton's.

Have your photo taken with SANTA

One of the most delightful moments in your child's life deserves to be a keepsake... have his visit with Santa captured in a color picture.

Each 1.19 (with sales tax 1.25)

The Marketplace, CBC television's new series for and about the Canadian consumer, will enjoy an extended run on the network, due to favorable audience response.

The program — telecast Thursdays at 10 p.m. — premiered Oct. 5 and was to have ended Dec. 28. The extension is for nine additional occasions, meaning the series now will conclude its current run with the telecast of March 1, 1973.

In commenting on the decision to extend The Marketplace, Knowlton Nash, director of TV information programs said that viewer reaction to the six editions of the series telecast to date had been most gratifying.

"I am extremely pleased that The Marketplace has met such an enthusiastic audience response," said Nash. "Clearly the program is meeting an audience need, and extending it into the new year is a recognition of the audience interest and our own responsibility in serving this public interest."

Bit parts: Robert Preston will sing an added song for the movie musical, Mame, titled Loving You. Canada's Vance Davis was added to the cast of John Wayne's Wednesday morning... Capitol Records signed a contract with the U.S.S.R.'s Mezhdunarodnaya Kniga Music Organization for recording significant new classical releases.

Marketplace Extended

CBC, audience research records indicate that The Marketplace to date has achieved an average 'enjoyment index' of 81. This means that 81 per cent of those who watch the program also thoroughly enjoy it. An index of 81 is considered very good. Such popular CBC series as Hockey Night in Canada, and the Partridge Family have averaged 80 so far this season.

Further evidence of active audience interest in the program is that fact that The Marketplace now receives about 100 letters a week from viewers. Series producer Jock Ferguson says the show will make increased use of consumer complaints and program suggestions received via audience mail, in future telecasts.

Consumer affairs specialist Joan Watson and popular CBC personality George Finstad are regulars on The Marketplace. Dodi Robb is executive producer.

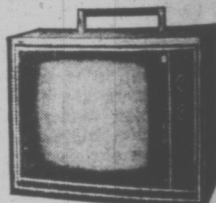

The CBC "arts magazine" series originally scheduled for the Thursday-at-10 spot as of Jan. 4, now will debut on March 8.

Lightweight Camera

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Actors, directors, writers and producers kid themselves that they are the vital elements in motion pictures and television. They are all wet.

The most important single component is the camera.

While acting techniques have improved somewhat and directors hone old skills, writers and producers are mired to the old ways.

But the camera has undergone some astonishing changes, not the least of which is a new silent, light weight beauty called the Panaflex.

The man responsible for the camera is Robert Gottschalk, president of Panavision Inc.

which already is the standard of movie cameras.

At his factory in Los Angeles Gottschalk explained: "The Panaflex doesn't have a blimp — the housing or case that fits around other cameras to keep the noise of the camera from interfering with the soundtrack."

Laymen have seen enough studio movie cameras to recognize their bulk — being pushed around on dollies, hoisted by heavy cranes and resting on giant tripods.

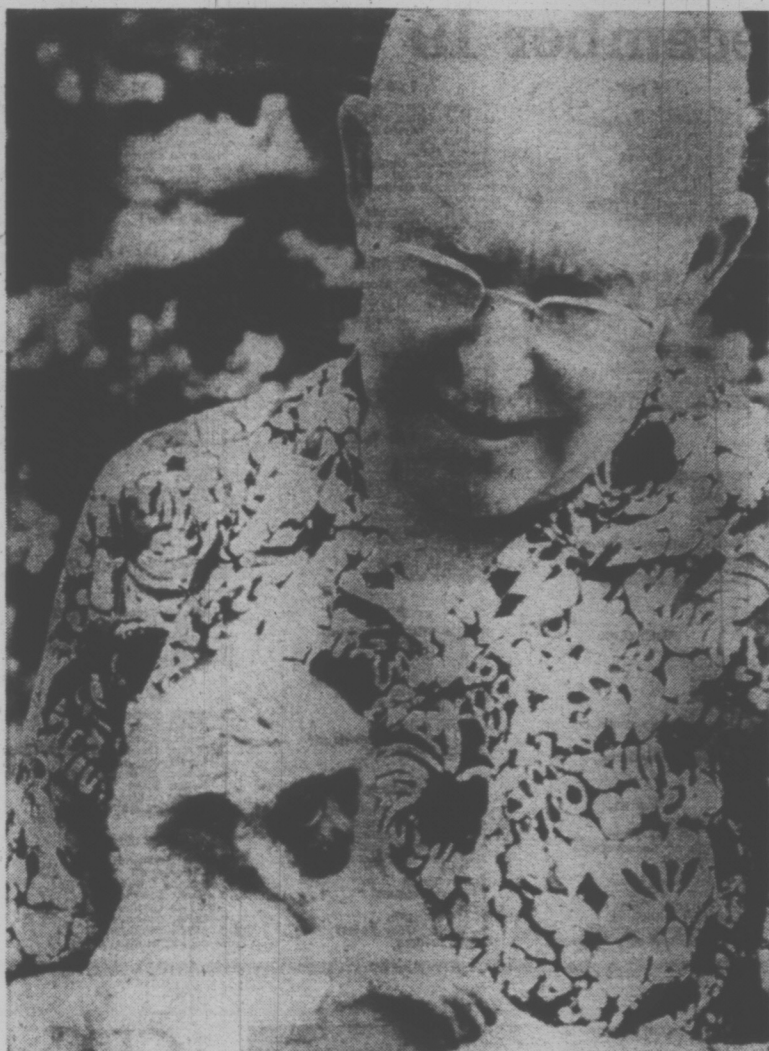

Not the Panaflex. It weighs only 25 pounds and can be hand-carried by camera operators. Instead of dollies they've been used by an operator sitting in a wheel chair.

"When sound first came along cameras were so noisy they had to be shot on one side of a wall through a window," Gottschalk said. "Then they built bungalows for cameras in which three crew members could isolate themselves and the noise of the machine."

Eventually a 300-pound blimp housed the cameras. It was heavy and awkward. For years they used the blimped noiseless camera (BNC) until we came along with this revolutionary development.

"It will open the door to new ways of making pictures. There is new scope in placing the camera and it will cut costs by allowing many more set-ups a day and eliminating the necessity for dubbing and looping."

Man Alive Profiles Dr. Robert McClure

"To me, of course, there's a tremendous thrill, of opening up a new chapter," says Bob McClure. "I take these different 'places' in my life — the war in China, the work in Gaza and in India — I think of all these as chapters. A chapter closed, let's look to the future!"

At 72, the irrepressible Dr. Robert McClure refuses to slow down. In Sarawak (Borneo), the former lay moderator of the United Church of Canada and his wife have returned to their former careers as medical missionaries. With enthusiasm to put many younger men to shame, the McClures now work at a small mission hospital maintained by the United Methodist Church (U.S.) at Kapit, along the Rajang River, in Sarawak.

On Monday, Dec. 18 at 10 p.m., Man Alive, the highly-acclaimed CBC television series on the religious, shares with the McClures a few moments in their new adventure, in They'll Tell Me When The Tread's Gone, a one-hour color special co-produced in association with Religious Television Associates of Toronto.

Written and directed by Peter Flemington, the film looks at daily activities in the new lives of the McClures, and features Bob McClure at the Hospital, where patients from as far as the Indonesian side of the island come for treatment.

As the camera tours the small, modern hospital — part of a large mission complex operated by the Methodists since 1903 in Sarawak — Dr. McClure discusses the new mental and procedural approaches he has had to learn to effectively cope with treating sickness and disease in that country. We see him relating to patients suffering from various illnesses, from typhoid, tuberculosis, fevers, malnutrition to infections — and performing surgery on a nomadic tribeswoman.

The film is first and foremost a documentary, focussing on devoted work of this great Canadian in a new and developing country and his relationship to colleagues in the joint development ministry of the Methodist Church. As the Church gradually phases out its support of the work being done along the Rajang, its agriculturists now strive to train Malaysians to carry on the innovative work.

Within a few years, the Government of Sarawak will take over Christ Hospital, effectively continue the work now done by volunteers like the McClures.

A surgeon who gained much of his fame through developing shoestring operating techniques, Dr. McClure has had somewhat of a change of heart in recent times. "I'm rather sold on the policy that when a Church offers health services to people, in the name of Christian love, it had better offer the best, or get out," he comments.

The program is a co-production for CBC television by Man Alive and Religious Television Associates, the combined broadcasting units of the United, Roman Catholic and Anglican Churches in Canada. Narrator is Roy Bonisteel, host of Man Alive. Edmond de Fay was the photographer, and the producer is Des McCalmont. The executive producer of Man Alive is Leo Rampen.

They'll Tell Me When The Tread's Gone will be telecast Monday, Dec. 18 at 10 p.m. (in color over the national CBC network, on Man Alive).

We Know Our Business

Don't Monkey Around with Your Car! Low-Cost Automatic Transmission Band Adjustment Will Solve Most of Your Problems for Very Little Cost . . .

WHAT WE DO:

- ROAD TEST—A qualified technician tests your car under normal driving conditions. He checks your transmission for seepage, pickup, shift points, lashes, etc.
- OIL TEST—For viscosity, material, color, smell, suspension. The vacuum line and throttle are checked for external leaks. Oil pan is removed to check type of debris or residue. The band is checked for wear, plus exterior inspection of transmission is made.
- ADJUSTMENTS — The filter is cleaned or replaced, bands are adjusted to factory specifications, linkage is reset.
- REASSEMBLY—The new gasket is installed, the pan is bolted.
- FLUID—New oil is installed in the transmission.
- ROAD TEST—The car is again road tested for final adjustment on the linkage.
- HOW LONG?—Actual work about 1 hour.
- COST—One hour labor plus generally some oil and a gasket, a filter ($4.15 for a Dodge Product), perhaps a modulator ($4.80 for a Chev.)
- GUARANTEE — 4,000 miles or 90 days in any of our 22 shops in Western Canada, and our 12,000-mile service guarantee.
- WHY?—You should service your automatic transmission every year or so — as they say: "An apple a day keeps the doctor away."
- SATURDAY—For better service our shop is open Saturday morning until 12 noon. Drive in on your free day.

MOVIES

Tuesday

Slander (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Van Johnson and Ann Blyth star in this 1956 drama about a TV performer whose career is endangered by an expose magazine.

As the Sea Rages (x), on 13 at noon. A crude plot mars this story of Yugoslavian refugees starring Maria Schell and Cliff Robertson.

The Ambassador's Daughter (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. So-so comedy about an American GI who falls in love with a diplomat's daughter starring Olivia de Havilland and John Forsythe.

Carousel (xxxx), on 5 at 4. Conclusion of this excellent Rodgers and Hammerstein musical starring Shirley Jones and Gordon MacRae.

Back Street (xx), on 7 at 4. Fannie Hurst's melodrama about a fashion designer's affair with a married man starring Susan Hayward and John Gavin.

All My Sons (xxx), on 13 at 4. Excellent 1949 drama based on an Arthur Miller play and starring Edward G. Robinson and Burt Lancaster.

Girl On the Run (x), on 12 at 7. A routine private eye drama starring Efrem Zimbalist Jr.

Your Money or Your Wife (xx), on 7 at 9:30. A 1972 mystery-comedy about a writer, a producer and a casting director teaming up to get even with a soap-opera star who quit their series. Good cast with Ted Bessell, Elizabeth Ashley and Jack Cassidy.

The Picasso Summer, on 7 and 12 at 11:30. No rating is available on this 1969 film which was never released to theatres. The slim plot — about a couple seeking out their idol, Pablo Picasso — is backed by surrealist animated sequences using Picasso's art. Michel Legrand composed the score the cast includes Albert Finney and Yvette Mimieux.

Ugetsu (xxx), on 2 at 11:30. A beautifully photographed film set in 16th century Japan. This 1953 drama centres around two friends who go their separate ways in their search for fulfillment.

Destination Inner Space (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Routine sci-fi adventure starring Scott Brady and Sheree North.

Hudson's Bay (xx), on 13 at 12:30. This 1941 adventure tells the story of the founding of the famed Hudson Bay Company and stars Paul Muni and Gene Tierney.

Season's Greetings From Mike Douglas, on 5 at 8. Christmas carols, comedy and the Canadian Children's Opera Chorus highlight this season's Mike Douglas special. (60 mins.)

ABC Theatre, on 4 at 8:30. Black Ghetto life as an ex-con and former addict sees it in a play titled, If You Give a Dance You Gotta Pay The Band. (90 mins.)

Woodsworth's 'Social Gospel'—The colorful career of Methodist-turned politician James Shaver Woodsworth is chronicled in the full-hour CBC Tuesday Night documentary entitled, Thy Kingdom Come: The Social Gospel in Canadian Politics. The film looks at the rise and spread of the Christian socialist movement in Canada and will be telecast on Tuesday, December 19 at 10 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6. Historic film clips trace the alliance between the political apostles, the prohibitionists and organized labor; the formation of the CCF party in 1932; and the role of former NDP leader Tommy Douglas. The documentary, filmed throughout Western Canada, includes an interview with former United Church minister Fred Tipping.

Ballet Special Stars Nureyev

A spectacular Christmas treat for CBC-TV viewers this season is the 90-minute color television version of The National Ballet of Canada production The Sleeping Beauty, with guest artist Rudolf Nureyev dancing the role of Prince Florimund opposite the company's Veronica Tennant as Princess Aurora.

With new choreography by Nureyev, after Petipa, the fairytale ballet also features Celia Franca, artistic director of the National Ballet, in the role of Carabosse, the Wicked Fairy.

The familiar Tchaikovsky score is performed by a full orchestra, under the baton of George Crum, musical director of the National Ballet.

The CBC-TV network telecast, Wednesday, December 20 at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6, will be shown without commercial messages with the exception of simple opening and closing statements.

Produced and directed by CBC's Emmy Award-winner, Norman Campbell, the TV version was taped at Toronto's O'Keefe Centre in October. It will also be telecast on the CBC French television network, and on National Educational Television stations in the United States — in both cases on December 17.

Since its debut at the National Arts Centre, Ottawa, in September, this new National Ballet of Canada production has filled theatres and won almost unanimous acclaim in Montreal, Toronto, Philadelphia and Boston, and is eagerly awaited in Vancouver, New York and other U.S. cities and towns where it will subsequently tour.

The most lavish production in the history of the National Ballet, its opulent costumes and scenery are created by Nicholas Georgiadis. The TV version uses the original sets and costumes, as well as the lighting design by David Hersey. CBC provided the producer-director Norman Campbell, cameramen and technical crews. There were six cameras placed strategically, on stage and in the audience sections of O'Keefe Centre for the taping. Each camera was linked to a videotape machine of its own, so that the producer-director has optimum choice in his editing of the final product.

The Sleeping Beauty, based on the well-known fairytale, unfolds in a prologue and three acts. On CBC-TV it will be introduced in an on-camera commentary by Rudolf Nureyev, who is first welcomed by Celia Franca, artistic director of the National Ballet of Canada. Nureyev speaks briefly of the Tchaikovsky ballet, and gives a capsule outline of the story.

Sleeping Beauty has been called one of the greatest theatrical achievements of the westward-looking culture of Imperial Russia, reflecting the aristocratic spirit of the St. Petersburg court, and the pomp and opulent grandeur of the Tsar himself.

Thursday

So This Is New York (xxx), on 4 at 9:30. An extremely funny and clever comedy about a small town family who come to the big city to find a man for their sister. Starring in this 1948 movie are Henry Morgan and Rudy Vallee.

No Sad Songs For Me (xx), on 13 at noon. A messy 1950 soap opera about how a wife and mother copes with the fact that she has only a few months to live. Worth watching only for the cast which includes Margaret Sullivan, Wendell Corey and Viveca Lindfors.

Samar (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. An interesting, unusual story of a commandant of a penal colony who refuses to bow to his superiors and leads his people through the jungle to freedom. Starring in this 1962 adventure-drama are George Montgomery and Joan O'Brien.

O. Henry's Full House (xxx), on 5 at 4. (Part 1.) Five of the author's tales in an entertaining package starring Anne Baxter, Marilyn Monroe and David Wayne. (Concludes tomorrow, same time and channel.)

Portrait in Black (xx), on 7 at 4. A 1960 drama about a woman and a doctor who are blackmailed after the murder of the woman's invalid husband. Cast includes Lana Turner, Anthony Quinn and Sandra Dee.

The Four Poster (xxx), on 13 at 4. A delightful 1952 comedy starring Rex Harrison and Lilli Palmer.

The Battle of Algiers (xxx), on 13 at 7:30. Director Gillo Pontecorvo's prize-winning recreation of Algeria's struggles to overthrow French colonialism - 1954-1962.

Will Penny (xxx), on 7 at 9. Charlton Heston has one of his best roles in this 1963 western about a range-weary saddle tramp in the autumn of his life. During a harsh Montana winter in the 1890s, the calm existence of his life is broken by a maniacal preacher out to kill him and a woman who offers him shelter. Supporting cast includes Donald Pleasance and Joan Hackett.

I Thank a Fool (xx), on 12 at 9. The Irish countryside provides a lush backdrop for this brooding tale of mystery, madness, and suspected murder starring Susan Hayward and Peter Finch - filmed in 1962.

Miracle in the Rain (xx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. Sentimental 1956 drama starring Jane Wyman and Van Johnson as two lonely people who fall in love in New York during the Second World War.

Laughter in Paradise (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. A delightful 1951 English-made comedy about a practical joker who leaves his fortune to four gamblers with the provision they fulfill certain humorous conditions. An excellent cast includes Alastair Sim, Fay Compton and Audrey Hepburn.

The Money Jungle (xx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. John Ericson and Lola Albright star in this 1963 mystery involving skulduggery over oil rights.

How To Murder a Rich Uncle (xxx), on 13 at 12:30. A mild comedy with an excellent cast including Charles Coburn and Wendy Hiller - filmed in 1958.

Television Questions and Answers

Q: Who did the singing for John Wayne in those old movies he made when he was young?—M.F.T.

A: He started out as a singing cowboy, but when sound equipment was improved to the point the audience could actually hear what he sounded like, he stopped.

Q: Settle an argument and tell me if the screenplay, "Love Story," or the book was written first? I heard Erich Segal wrote the movie before the novel. Everyone disagrees with me.—B.G.S.

A: You're right, sort of. He started with a screenplay which didn't sell. He then did the novel, and finally, a second version of a screenplay which became the movie.

Q: I have a couple of questions concerning the "Ironside" TV series. First I would like to know is it actually filmed in San Francisco or Los Angeles? Either way, is the building shown to be his office actually located in San Francisco?—S.S.

A: It's filmed at Universal Studios, Los Angeles, but extensive background footage is shot in San Francisco and occasionally the show goes on location there. The building was the old San Francisco police headquarters and did exist when the series started. Since then, it has been torn down, but the show continues to use the old photo murals and stock footage as though it still existed.

Prisoner of War (xx), on 4 at 9:30. Ronald Reagan plays a U.S. army intelligence officer during the Korean War in this 1954 drama.

Private Hell 36 (xx), on 13 at noon. Two detectives are assigned to find the man who passed a 50-dollar bill that was part of stolen holdup money in this 1954 crime drama that stars Ida Lupino.

Mr. Magoo's Storybook (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Cartoon fantasy with Mr. Magoo (voice of Jim Backus) telling the story of Snow White, Don Quixote and A Midsummer Night's Dream.

O. Henry's Full House (xxx), on 5 at 4. Conclusion of this excellent 1952 movie comprising five of the author's stories.

Gidget Goes to Rome (x), on 7 at 4. In the Eternal City, Gidget falls for a suave friend of her dad's. Cast includes Cindy Carol and James Darren.

Long Day's Journey Into Night (xxxx), on 13 at 7:30. An unrelenting, shattering film, magnificently directed and starring Katherine Hepburn, Ralph Richardson, Jason Robards Jr., and Dean Stockwell. This 1963 movie is Eugene O'Neill's triumphant tragedy, largely autobiographical, of a New England family and their relationships alternately wavering between love and hate, guilt and pride. This movie boasts stunning performances by both Hepburn and Robards and will haunt the viewer for a long time.

ALISTAIR COOKE'S AMERICA

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

The Washington Post

Alistair Cooke has spent 35 of his 63 years in the United States, and the results of this deep love affair are apparent in the 13-episode history series called America: A Personal View (alternate Tuesdays, NBC).

Cooke, in a telephone interview, said he has worked three years and travelled over 100,000 miles on this series. He estimates that he wrote "half a million words, which were boiled down to about 2,000 words per show."

This is Cooke's third television series. He is best known to viewers as the cultural head waiter on the Omnibus series, which showed the great promise of the television medium. He served as the Omnibus host from November, 1953 until January, 1961. Then he "did nothing on TV" until last year, when he began appearing on Public Television as the host for Masterpiece Theatre.

He has repeated several times the story of how he came to do this series. He had done a lecture for the British Broadcasting Corp. about his American experiences and how he "learned to love the country and its journalism." The following day a BBC official telephoned and suggested that Cooke "distill the American experience for us."

Michael Gill, a BBC producer, was sent to talk with Cooke. Gill had just completed work on the towering Civilization series with Sir Kenneth Clark.

Cooke decided several weeks later that the series should be "chronological," beginning with the earliest Indian settlements and moving forward to the present. "I wanted," he said, "to capture the whole American experience."

The series was co-produced by the BBC and time-life films, and the sponsor is Xerox. This is an enlightened record with the whining of jets, the roar of trucks and even the rustling of leaves was impossible. Without noise, he said, "the series would have been done in eight months, instead of three years."

As a result, much of the filming had to be done at night, when noise levels drop. He worked at night, for example, in Thomas Jefferson's Monticello, near Charlottesville, Va.; at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, and at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. His life, during this period, was "absolutely irregular."

Cooke and producer Gill also decided they would not use actors or reenactments. None of the "You Are There" techniques were used. Instead, there is a heavy reliance on paintings, documents and, occasionally, photographs. This is the technique that works so well for Civilization.

Even with such graphics, Cooke crisscrossed the United States. He liked to be on the spot that was being discussed, and this meant visiting sites at Concord, Mass., and Williamsburg, Va., and to the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains and to the city of San Francisco.

For all the effort that went into America, the careful student of television viewing patterns knows from the outset that it cannot be a ratings success. It alternates with the NBC Reports series, which is usually at the very bottom of the Nielsen popularity reports. But both the sponsor and the network understood this from the beginning and each decided, low ratings or not, the series was still worthy of being telecast.

Cooke's own hopes for the series are quite modest. "I hope," he said, "this series will help humanize some of America's heroes and villains, and bring history alive."

Canora, grand old lady of the B.C. coast, under tow by tug on way to new career

Canora Gets A New Job

Times Staff

Canora, the oldest steamship on this coast, is coming out of mothballs to begin a new career as a floating sawmill and training centre for Indians in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The old Canadian National car ferry, built in Levis, Quebec, in 1918, left her berth at the Inner Harbor today and was towed to Vancouver by the tug Island Commander.

There she will be readied for her new assignment. After plying these waters for nearly 50 years she was pensioned off in 1968 and sold to local businessmen, Harold Elworthy and the late Morris Greene.

Her new owners are Goodwin Johnson (1960) Ltd. of Vancouver.

Company spokesman Art Ward said today that, in addition to the $76,500 paid for the oldtimer, an additional $150,000 will be spent on fitting out the Canora for her new role.

Ward, who has built and designed sawmills around the world, describes the Canora project as "unique."

"Both the federal and provincial governments will participate in the training program.

His company and Industrial Development will outfit her so that she will be completely hydraulically equipped, electric power only being used to supply lighting in order to cut down corrosion from salt water.

"She will be complete in every sense of the word," Ward said, "and her hydraulic equipment will be quite unique."

When completed she will be taken to Naden harbor, near Masset in the Queen Charlottes.

"We will build a small Suez Canal there," Ward explained, "in which she will stay for three or four years before being moved to another location that we have in the islands."

Ward said training of the Indians will begin in Vancouver harbor during Canora's conversion.

"Gordon Kelly and other key workers will be brought down so that they can learn everything that goes into her," Ward said.

When Canora is in operation at Naden harbor, Ward said that, working in two shifts, 67 Indians will be employed aboard the floating sawmill.

"A total of between 130 and 137 men, counting those we'll

LONDON (AP) — Anthony Barber, chancellor of the exchequer, said today Britain will not repeg its floating pound sterling at a new fixed exchange rate before the country enters the European Common Market Jan. 1.

CALIFORNIA WATERS DARWIN'S THEORY

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California state board of education, rejecting pleas from scientists, has voted to downgrade Darwin's theory of evolution in new science texts for 3.3 million school children.

The board also left the door open Thursday to possible later rewriting of the texts to include the Bible-oriented doctrine of special creation beside the theory of evolution.

"May I say, without apology, that we Christians would like equal time," said board member Eugene Ragle.

The board ordered editorial changes stressing that Darwin's theory is speculative and not fact. That change will be required in basic science texts intended for children in kindergarten through Grade 8 before the state will buy the books.

Rocks Come First To This Moonman

Washington Post

HOUSTON — It was a clear example of Jack Schmitt, geologist, taking over from Jack Schmitt, astronaut.

He was being ordered to press on — to leave the rim of Van Serg crater "immediately if not sooner."

But Schmitt, the first professional geologist ever to explore the moon, had spotted some grey soil that he said "may be the youngest mantle that was ever thrown out of the craters."

"We can't leave this," he told Bob Parker at Mission Control Centre. "Bob, we've got to take five more minutes."

Mission Control isn't used to that kind of talk from astronauts on the moon; generally the word from the Manned Space Craft Centre here is law. Schmitt, indeed realized this; he commented to fellow lunar explorer Eugene Cernan that "Bob's mad as us."

The Apollo 17 astronauts flew from the moon Thursday, the last of 12 Apollo astronauts on the lunar surface and possibly the last men on the moon in this century.

Cernan and Schmitt rejoined their colleague Ronald Evans in lunar orbit just before 8 p.m. Thursday night when they docked the ascent stage of the landing craft Challenger with the command craft America.

The docking took place 60 miles above the moon's Apennine mountains and in full view of everybody at the Manned Spacecraft Centre, who saw it all from a television camera looking out one of the five windows of the command craft.

All three astronauts will spend the next two days in lunar orbit making 24 more revolutions of the moon while instruments inside an open bay at the rear of the command craft go on conducting experiments.

The reason for staying two days in lunar orbit rather than heading straight back to earth is to bring the most out of an orbital science instrument package.

Larry Stanford with police after hijack

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department is expected to introduce tougher security measures in Canadian airports in 1973.

But departmental spokesmen refused to be specific on security matters today in the wake of the hijacking of a Quebecair aircraft in Wabush, Labrador, Thursday.

They said they did not want to tip their hand to potential hijackers.

Larry Maxwell Stanford, 21, of Saint John, N.B., was charged early today with hijacking.

Four crew members were held hostage for 10½ hours by a man who boarded the plane in Wabush with a single-shot .22-calibre rifle. The 52 passengers and one stewardess left the plane during the first one-hour 15-minute stop at Montreal.

The hijacker, described by passengers as nervous, had said he would release the crew only after he had seen his father and a psychiatrist.

When he first boarded the plane in Wabush he said he wanted to go to Vancouver, but when told the aircraft would have to refuel at Montreal he agreed to the stop.

At Montreal the passengers and one stewardess were allowed to disembark and the plane was ordered to Ottawa.

As soon as the plane touched down at Ottawa, the man said he wanted to go back, then changed his mind again. After a 15-minute stop, he was persuaded by stewardess Josette Cote to return to Montreal and consult a psychiatrist, airport officials said.

Canadian airline pilots have been assured the government will tighten security with a new system sometime in the new year.

The government has reportedly told the pilots that the new system would involve a mixture of electronic and traditional checking methods.

A Canadian Airline Pilots Association spokesman said in a telephone interview from Montreal today the association is not satisfied with current methods.

Electronic methods are being used at major airports across Canada to check for weapons on passengers and in baggage.

Most airlines in Canada only use spot checks but CALPA would like checking applied to all passengers on all flights.

PAUL'S SNACK SHOCKED MUM

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — An 18-month-old boy shocked his mother Thursday by eating a live and wriggling poisonous snake in front of her.

Mrs. Ronald Jess, said her son Paul ate the head and eight inches of the snake, identified as one of Western Australia's most venomous — a baby Dugite — before she could get to him.

"I found him with just the tail, still wriggling, in his mouth," she said. "When I snatched that from him and threw it on the ground he grabbed it to have another go."

"He didn't like it taken off him. It must have had a good flavor."

"I didn't have time to think — rushed him to the drug store first and rang the hospital. I had to tell them three times and spell out the word snake because they'd never heard of a child eating a live snake."

Mrs. Jess said the snake probably was not very venomous as it was only about 12 inches long.

Adults Dugites grow to a length of six feet.

Further Delay In Peace Hunt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Agreement on a Vietnam ceasefire seems headed for a further delay, possibly for weeks, while the White House tries to find the formula for an acceptable peace settlement.

President Nixon met twice Thursday with his chief foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, who returned late Wednesday night from Paris after 10 days of talks with Hanoi's principal negotiator, Le Duc Tho.

The White House maintained its refusal to comment on how the talks were progressing — or why they might be stalled — but occasional clues that emerged seemed to signify that much of the difficulty still lies with Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has been insisting that all North Vietnamese troops must leave the South before he will sign an agreement and that his country must be assured its sovereignty and integrity.

The Columbia Broadcasting System quoted President Nixon as telling friends Thursday that a fundamental issue still remained unsolved and that peace still seemed a long way off.

However, an official spokesman for the South Vietnamese government said today in Saigon that "basically our views on a peace agreement are identical to the views of the United States."

"We are not dissatisfied with our relations with the United States," he said.

"There may be differences on some small points but we are basically in agreement" on the status of peace negotiations.

But White House spokesman

Copter Saves Sailors

HALIFAX (CP) — All 18 crew members of the disabled West German ship Rumba were removed early today as the part-container vessel continued to wallow in heavy seas about 200 miles southeast of Cape Race, Nfld.

Among those rescued by helicopter was the mate of an assisting tug.

The spectacular rescue of the remaining 13 men aboard was performed in gale-force winds this morning by a Canadian Forces Labrador helicopter.

The men were lifted aboard by a motorized winch, one by one.

The 2,960-ton Rumba was reported in danger of capsizing this morning with eight 150-ton locomotives loose in her hold and another eight locomotives still secured on her deck as 27-foot seas and 50 mile an hour winds battered the vessel.

The vessels are about 250 miles south southwest of the Newfoundland capital.

BRIDE-TO-BE KILLED

BELFAST (CP) — A 19-year-old girl returning from mailing invitations to her wedding caught the full blast of a bomb that rocked a village in Northern Ireland Thursday night and died almost immediately.

Kathleen Dolan was to have been married Jan. 13.

The bomb was planted in a car parked outside a tavern in Killeter, owned by her father, Frank Dolan. Early today, doctors were fighting to save his life and those of two customers cut by flying rubble and glass. Three other persons were wounded less seriously.

Neighbors said Miss Dolan left the pub a few minutes before the explosion crossed the street, put her invitations into the mailbox in front of the post office and headed back. Police said her mutilated body was found amid a heap of wreckage by a priest.

Police would not speculate on who might have been responsible for the bombing. But the Dolans were believed a Roman Catholic family, and it was at their door the automobile with the bomb was parked.

Killeter, in County Tyrone, is some five miles from the British province's western border with the Irish republic.

The post office, which also is the village general store, was wrecked by the explosion.

Hold Off Highway—Davis

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Construction of the $100 million-plus Mackenzie Valley highway, the spine of any future pipeline corridor out of the Arctic, should be delayed at least a year, Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis has recommended to cabinet.

The highway is being pushed ahead too fast, experts in the environment department and on the one-year-old federal environmental advisory council have told the environment minister.

Davis and his senior officials have concluded that the environment department experts on the scene of the highway construction need more time to select the best possible route, designs and construction methods to safeguard the northern environment along the route.

Officials in Ottawa said Thursday they believe other major departments interested in highway project, such as the energy and northern development, also agree that a delay in the construction would be advisable.

More specifically, Davis is recommending that construction scheduled for next winter be kept to an absolute minimum, so that environment department experts responsible for supervising environmental aspects of the construction can get far enough ahead with their research and planning to do the best job for the whole highway construction.

Such a stretching out of the construction would mean that the highway could not be finished before the winter of 1976-77, instead of 1975-76 as now tentatively scheduled, a senior environment department official said Thursday.

Davis indicated he hopes a decision will be made by cabinet on the recommendation before Christmas.

If accepted, a delay in the construction of the Mackenzie Valley highway could have a number of significant consequences.

For one, if the government

SANTA ARRIVING BY AIR, SEA

Santa will make two appearances in Sidney on Saturday, Dec. 16, arriving by helicopter in the morning and by boat in the afternoon.

Sanscha grounds will be the landing pad for Santa's arrival at 9:30 a.m. which will be followed by a parade to the Gem Theatre, free treats and a show for all the kids.

The Bellingham Santa Ship will tie up to Sidney wharf, foot of Beacon Ave. at about 4 p.m. and more treats will be distributed by Sanata and his band of pirate helpers.

Health Plans Denied

Health Minister Dennis Cocke has denied a newspaper report which said regional hospital boards in the province will be expanded to cover almost all other health services.

Cocke said Thursday night in Vancouver that it is by no means certain this step will be taken, as was suggested in the report in Thursday's Daily Colonist. The Colonist report quoted a spokesman for a committee Cocke has established under Dr. Richard Foulkes which is undertaking a year-long study of health services in B.C.

"It's only an idea that has come up in discussion," Cocke said.

"This is just one of many alternatives. There are all sorts of discussions on the re-vamping of health service."

The spokesman for the health study committee, who apparently asked not to be named, said a few basic ideas "are coming into focus."

The most important, the spokesman was quoted as saying, was the concept of establishing "umbrella" regional boards, which would administer not only hospitals but other health service facilities as well, including social services, public health and mental health.

Sandringham Strike Discussed

Leading officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees were meeting in Victoria today to discuss the strike against Sandringham Private Hospital.

The strike, 115 weeks old today, is being waged by CUPE's Local 1311 for a first contract. Recent negotiations with the hospital failed to produce an agreement.

Jim Murrie, western region director of CUPE, said the "present situation in regard to negotiations" between Sandringham and the union "will be reviewed."

The two-day meeting of CUPE staff representatives in B.C. is being attended by Gil Levine, national research director, J. F. MacMillan, national director of organization, Pasquale Ingento, assistant director of organization, and Harry Greene of Vancouver, general vice-president of CUPE and president of the B.C. division.

Canora, grand old lady of the B.C. coast, under tow by tug on way to new career

Canora Gets A New Job

Times Staff

Canora, the oldest steamship on this coast, is coming out of mothballs to begin a new career as a floating sawmill and training centre for Indians in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The old Canadian National car ferry, built in Lewis, Quebec, in 1918, left her berth at the Inner Harbor today and was towed to Vancouver by the tug Island Commander.

There she will be readied for her new assignment.

After playing these waters for nearly 50 years she was pensioned off in 1968 and sold to local businessmen, Harold Elworthy and the late Morris Greene.

Her new owners are Goodwin Johnson (1960) Ltd. of Vancouver.

Company spokesman Art Ward said today that, in addition to the $75,500 paid for the old timer, an additional $150,000 will be spent on fitting out the Canora for her new role.

Ward, who has built and designed sawmills around the world, describes the Canora project as "unique."

Both the federal and provincial governments will participate in the training program.

His company and Industrial Development will outfit her so that she will be completely hydraulically equipped, electric power only being used to supply lighting in order to cut down corrosion from salt water.

"She will be complete in every sense of the word," Ward said, "and her hydraulic equipment will be quite unique."

When completed she will be taken to Naden harbor, near Masset in the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"We will build a small Suez Canal there," Ward explained, "in which she will stay for three or four years before being moved to another location that we have in the islands."

Ward said training of the Indians will begin in Vancouver harbor during Canora's conversion.

"Gordon Kelly and other key workers will be brought down so that they can learn everything that goes into her," Ward said.

When Canora is in operation at Naden harbor, Ward said that, working in two shifts, 67 Indians will be employed aboard the floating sawmill.

CALIFORNIA WATERS DARWIN'S THEORY

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — The California state board of education, rejecting pleas from scientists, has voted to downgrade Darwin's theory of evolution in new science texts for 3.3 million school children.

The board also left the door open Thursday to possible later rewriting of the texts to include the Bible-oriented doctrine of special creation beside the theory of evolution.

"May I say, without apology, that we Christians would like equal time," said board member Eugene Ragle.

The board ordered editorial changes stressing that Darwin's theory is speculative and not fact. That change will be required in basic science texts intended for children in kindergarten through Grade 8 before the state will buy the books.

Rocks Come First To This Moonman

Washington Post

HOUSTON — It was a clear example of Jack Schmitt, geologist, taking over from Jack Schmitt, astronaut.

He was being ordered to press on — to leave the rim of Van Serg crater "immediately if not sooner."

But Schmitt, the first professional geologist ever to explore the moon, had spotted some grey soil that he said "may be the youngest mantle that was ever thrown out of the craters."

"We can't leave this," he told Bob Parker at Mission Control Centre. "Bob, we've got to take five more minutes."

Mission Control isn't used to that kind of talk from astronauts on the moon; generally the word from the Manned Space Craft Centre here is law. Schmitt, indeed realized this; he commented to fellow lunar explorer Eugene Cernan that "Bob's mad at us."

The Apollo 17 astronauts flew from the moon Thursday, the last of 12 Apollo astronauts on the lunar surface and possibly the last men on the moon in this century.

Cernan and Schmitt rejoined their colleague Ronald Evans in lunar orbit just before 8 p.m. Thursday night when they docked the ascent stage of the landing craft Challenger with the command craft America.

Air Piracy Crackdown In 1973

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department is expected to introduce tougher security measures in Canadian airports in 1973.

But departmental spokesmen refused to be specific on security matters today in the wake of the hijacking of a Quebecair aircraft in Wabush, Labrador, Thursday.

They said they did not want to tip their hand to potential hijackers.

Larry Maxwell Stanford, 21, of Saint John, N.B., was charged early today with hijacking.

Four crew members were held hostage for 10½ hours by a man who boarded the plane in Wabush with a single-shot .22-calibre rifle. The 52 passengers and one stewardess left the plane during the first one-hour 15-minute stop at Montreal.

The hijacker, described by passengers as nervous, had said he would release the crew only after he had seen his father and a psychiatrist.

When he first boarded the plane in Wabush he said he wanted to go to Vancouver, but when told the aircraft would have to refuel at Montreal he agreed to the stop.

At Montreal the passengers and one stewardess were allowed to disembark and the plane was ordered to Ottawa.

As soon as the plane touched down at Ottawa, the man said he wanted to go back, then changed his mind again. After a 15-minute stop, he was persuaded by stewardess Josette Cote to return to Montreal and consult a psychiatrist, airport officials said.

Canadian airline pilots have been assured the government will tighten security with a new system sometime in the new year.

The government has reportedly told the pilots that the new system would involve a mixture of electronic and traditional checking methods.

A Canadian Airline Pilots Association spokesman said in a telephone interview from Montreal today the association is not satisfied with current methods.

Electronic methods are being used at major airports across Canada to check for weapons on passengers and in baggage.

Most airlines in Canada only use spot checks but CALPA would like checking applied to all passengers on all flights.

SNAKE SNACK SHOCKS MUM

PERTH, Australia (UPI) — An 18-month-old boy shocked his mother Thursday by eating a live and wriggling poisonous snake in front of her.

Mrs. Ronald Jess, said her son Paul ate the head and eight inches of the snake, identified as one of Western Australia's most venomous — a baby Dugite — before she could get to him.

"I found him with just the tail, still wriggling, in his mouth," she said. "When I snatched that from him and threw it on the ground he grabbed it to have another go."

"He didn't like it taken off him. It must have had a good flavor."

"I didn't have time to think — rushed him to the drug store first and rang the hospital. I had to tell them three times and spell out the word snake because they'd never heard of a child eating a live snake."

Mrs. Jess said the snake probably was not very venomous as it was only about 12 inches long.

Further Delay In Peace Hunt

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Agreement on a Vietnam ceasefire seems headed for a further delay, possibly for weeks, while the White House tries to find the formula for an acceptable peace settlement.

President Nixon met twice Thursday with his chief foreign policy adviser, Henry Kissinger, who returned late Wednesday night from Paris after 10 days of talks with Hanoi's principal negotiator, Le Duc Tho.

The White House maintained its refusal to comment on how the talks were progressing — or why they might be stalled — but occasional clues that emerged seemed to signify that much of the difficulty still lies with Saigon.

President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has been insisting that all North Vietnamese troops must leave the South before he will sign an agreement and that his country must be assured its sovereignty and integrity.

The Columbia Broadcasting System quoted President Nixon as telling friends Thursday that a fundamental issue still remained unsolved.

Copter Saves Sailors

HALIFAX (CP) — All 18 crew members of the disabled West German ship Rumba were removed early today as the part-container vessel continued to wallow in heavy seas about 200 miles southeast of Cape Race, Nfld.

Among those rescued by helicopter was the mate of an assisting tug.

The spectacular rescue of the remaining 13 men aboard was performed in gale-force winds this morning by a Canadian Forces Labrador helicopter.

The men were lifted aboard by a motorized winch, one by one.

The 2,950-ton Rumba was reported in danger of capsizing this morning with eight 350-ton locomotives loose in her hold and another eight locomotives still secured on her deck as 27-foot seas and 50 mile an hour winds battered the vessel.

The vessels are about 250 miles south-southwest of the Newfoundland capital.

BRIDE-TO-BE KILLED

BELFAST (CP) — A 19-year-old girl returning from mailing invitations to her wedding caught the full blast of a bomb that rocked a village in Northern Ireland Thursday night and died almost immediately.

Kathleen Dolan was to have been married Jan. 13.

The bomb was planted in a car parked outside a tavern in Killeter owned by her father, Frank Dolan. Early today, doctors were fighting to save his life and those of two customers cut by flying rubble and glass. Three other persons were wounded less seriously.

Neighbors said Miss Dolan left the pub a few minutes before the explosion, crossed the street, put her invitations into the mailbox in front of the post office and headed back. Police said her mutilated body was found amid a heap of wreckage by a priest.

Police would not speculate on who might have been responsible for the bombing. But the Dolans were believed a Roman Catholic family, and it was at their door the automobile with the bomb was parked.

Killeter, in County Tyrone, is some five miles from the British province's western border with the Irish republic.

The post office, which also is the village general store, was wrecked by the explosion.

Hold Off Highway—Davis

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Construction of the $100 million-plus Mackenzie Valley highway, the spine of any future pipeline corridor out of the Arctic, should be delayed at least a year, Federal Environment Minister Jack Davis has recommended to cabinet.

The highway is being pushed ahead too fast, experts in the environment department and on the one-year-old federal environmental advisory council have told the environment minister.

Davis and his senior officials have concluded that the environment department experts on the scene of the highway construction need more time to select the best possible route, designs and construction methods to safeguard the northern environment along the route.

Officials in Ottawa said Thursday they believe other major departments interested in highway projects, such as the energy and northern development, also agree that a delay in the construction would be advisable.

More specifically, Davis is recommending that construction scheduled for next winter be kept to an absolute minimum, so that environment department experts responsible for supervising environmental aspects of the construction can get far enough ahead with their research and planning to do the best job for the whole highway construction.

Such a stretching out of the construction would mean that the highway could not be finished before the winter of 1976-77, instead of 1975-76 as now tentatively scheduled, a senior environment department official said Thursday.

Davis indicated he hopes a decision will be made by cabinet on the recommendation before Christmas.

If accepted, a delay in the construction of the Mackenzie Valley highway could have a number of significant consequences.

For one, if the government

PROFS GRADED BY STUDENTS

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A procedure whereby students can evaluate their professors and thus affect their promotions was approved by the University of Western Ontario senate Thursday.

Under the new plan all faculties, schools and departments must distribute a questionnaire to students and give them class time to mark the cards.

The students will evaluate instructors on characteristics ranging from speaking ability and how well they answer questions, to interesting presentation and general effectiveness as a teacher.

The final question will rate the professors from "outstanding teacher" down to "a very poor teacher."

The results will be held by deans until examination results are returned to students, then summarized for presentation to the committee on promotion and tenure. A lecturer who gets a bad mark from his students would have trouble getting a promotion or achieving tenure.

The senate move was criticised by Robert Stikeman, president of the student council which for three years has been attempting its own evaluation.

Several members of senate criticised the questions as not being applicable to all sections of the university.

Rescue Bid

Three minesweepers and the Coast Guard work boat Quadra II were still searching this afternoon for a small vessel which was reported out of fuel and drifting six miles south of Race Rocks.

"We're still trying to pin him down — he didn't give us a very good position to go on," said a spokesman at the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt.

The duty officer at the centre said the boat's distress message was picked up by U.S. authorities and relayed here.

Winds in the area were getting "pretty strong," he added.

Heroin 'Pawn' Gets Year

A 19-year-old woman, described by Judge William Ostler as "a small pawn in the deadliest of games" was sentenced in provincial court today to one year in prison and placed on two years' probation for trafficking in heroin.

Win Some

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — The Hiroshima High Court acquitted former policeman Tamotsu Okabe Thursday of a charge of murdering six members of a family but sentenced him to a six-month suspended sentence for stealing a manhole cover. The acquittal ended a series of trials which began in 1956. Okabe, 54, spent 14 years in jail during the trials.

Janice Faye Bateson was arrested Dec. 1 after selling heroin to RCMP officers at a Linden Avenue location. She pleaded guilty Dec. 4.

Crown prosecutor Mike Hutchison said the Crown regretted it had to ask for a prison sentence, in view of the accused's youth and her lack of previous convictions. He added, however, that a jail sentence was required as a necessary deterrent.

In passing sentence, Ostler said that he recognized that Bateson was "a very small pawn in the deadliest of games... you are no match for the vultures... who are really profiting" (from the heroin traffic).

"I am very sorry that I cannot punish the real criminal who has put you up to this," said the judge.

Bateson admitted Dec. 4 that she was a heroin addict, having been on the drug for two years, and now needed four to five caps a day.

Bylaw Defeat Rapped

DUNCAN — The defeat of a subdivision bylaw for Mill Bay by the Cowichan Valley Regional Board Wednesday evening was a "misuse of the democratic process," said Gerald Patterson, chairman of the area's advisory planning commission.

Although the majority of Mill Bay residents are in favor of the bylaw, which was to put a temporary freeze on subdivisions until zoning could be introduced, directors defeated it by a narrow margin when it came up for final reading. They felt that people who have made provisions to develop land in the area would be hurt.

The defeat of the bylaw forces the APC to start all over again if they still want regulations brought in.

Patterson said Thursday that he and his committee had threatened to resign en masse after the defeat of the bylaw they have worked on so hard since June. He said they reconsidered later because "the majority of Mill Bay residents are in favor of the bylaw and we feel we should continue on their behalf."

Patterson said his committee "was disgusted at the misuse of the democratic process" when the bylaw was vetoed.

"A minority pressure group from the area exerted considerable pressure in order to achieve this end," he said.

Chairman of the board's planning committee Trevor Daniels, director for Cowichan Bay, said Thursday that "I think the regional board as it is presently operating is a sick joke. It is a waste of time and a waste of taxpayers' money."

Council Reopens James Bay Zoning Decision

Just two weeks after the B.C. Appeal Court ruled that Victoria city council improperly rezoned property in James Bay, council Thursday reopened the procedure to rezone it again.

First readings were given to a bylaw rezoning property at Menzies and Simcoe from high-rise to commercial, and council decided to hold a public hearing on the matter Dec. 28.

But the move was protested by Ald. Harold Olafson, who urged council repeatedly to appeal the ruling to the Supreme Court of Canada, or even to use the double approach of appealing and reopening zoning procedures.

"I would like to see justice done, not the law," said Olafson. "It's time the municipalities attacked the courts for some of their rulings on decisions councils have made."

The property in question, owned by Yennadon Holdings Ltd., is across the street from land owned by developer J. A. Mace and proposed for the Bay Village apartment-shopping complex.

Mace fought the rezoning decision in the courts, substantially on a technicality. Initially the B.C. Supreme Court ruled that the irregularity in the rezoning process was insufficient to invalidate the zoning change, but later the bylaw was quashed for illegality by the B.C. Appeal Court in a two-to-one decision.

Establishment of the shopping centre proposed by Yennadon would mean nearby commercial competition for the Mace development.

In a letter submitted to Thursday's council meeting, Yennadon's solicitors pointed out that the bylaw was quashed on a technical procedural point.

Acting on the rezoning decision, it said, Yennadon has spent $225,000 in acquiring the property itself, while the Bank of Montreal has spent over $100,000 renovating its premises on the site.

In addition, Yennadon had committed itself, under contract with the bank to demolish existing buildings and rebuild on the property by Jan. 1, 1974.

Olafson, in urging the appeal against the latest court ruling, said there was an important principle involved.

Soviet Jews Stay

TEL AVIV (AP) — More than 4,350 of the 5,000 Soviet Jews who came to Israel in mid-1971 have stayed in the Jewish state, the ministry of absorption reported Tuesday. Of about 40 who packed up and left, a ministry spokesman said: "We don't know exactly where they go, but we know that few go back to Russia."

Any developer could use the decision "as a reference to attack any council on some zoning matter."

Ald. Percy Frampton said he had little sympathy for Yennadon as the firm had committed itself to large expenditure knowing the bylaw was the subject of litigation.

He pointed out that at the time Mace first decided to go ahead with the Bay Village proposal the property across the street was apartment zoned. The rezoning to commercial use had affected Mace's financing, and Mace felt there was "a moral obligation" involved on council's part.

Mayor Peter Pollen told Frampton he thought it "preposterous" to suggest that exclusivity of zoning should be the basis of any undertaking to finance a development, or that the city should maintain such exclusive zoning to protect what was essentially a monopoly situation.

Council gave first three readings to the bylaw rezoning the Yennadon property to commercial. Final passing of the bylaw will be considered after the Dec. 28 hearing.

Parkland School Opening Marked by Grade Shuffle

A shuffle of intermediate grades at the north end of Saanich Peninsula will take place next September to coincide with the opening of the new Parkland Secondary School.

All Grade 7 students from Deep Cove, Sansbury, McTavish and Sidney elementary schools will attend the present North Saanich Junior High on McDonald Park Rd. as well as Grade 6 Sidney students.

Grade 8 will continue in North Saanich Junior High, providing what director of instruction for Saanich School District Tom Elwood calls "a better deal for the upper intermediate age group."

The shift will relieve overcrowding at the district's north end where nearly 200 students are being bused daily out of Sidney to neighboring elementary schools which in turn, are becoming too crowded.

Deep Cove, McTavish and Sansbury elementary schools

will house Grades 1 to 6, Sidney elementary will accommodate kindergarten and grades one to five.

At Parkland, Grades 9, 10 and 11 will total about 560 students in September. Elwood explains that in order to provide continuity for present Grade 11 students at Claremont who live at the north end, they will continue to be bused to Claremont for their graduating year.

The district is adopting these measures in order to cope with the present population bulge which, even with zero growth, will bring enrollment at Parkland in Sept. 1974 to 800 students.

Projections of school populations are becoming increasingly dicey, says Elwood. It has been predicted that within three years, a nationwide drop in the number of students entering elementary school will leave classrooms empty.

In the Elk Lake district, an elementary school is short of pupils because the area which was once popular for low-priced family housing, has now become a prestigious district mostly occupied by retired and childless couples.

"We are into a new game with population predictions" added Elwood, mentioning the factors of birth control and abortion.

Saanich School Board approved the establishment of intermediate grades at North Saanich Junior High at a meeting Wednesday.

Trustee Gordon Ewan was the lone objector. The prospect of shifting more students by bus should, he said, be discussed at an open meeting and the decision should not be made by a "lame duck" board, three of whom were retiring from the board this month.

Parents and the public will be invited to discuss the new arrangements at community meetings to be held by board members.

ONLY ATLAS BRINGS YOU A DEAL LIKE THIS:

Buy 2 Atlas tires from your Esso dealer and get a coupon for 20 gallons of any Esso gas. Free.

Any Esso gasoline—Esso, Esso Extra or Esso 2000.

Need more than 2 tires? You get more than 20 gallons. 3 Atlas tires will get you 30 gallons. 4 will get you 40 and 5 will get you 50.

And you can get the free gas with any combination of snow and summer tires included in this offer.

After you've bought your Atlas tires, you'll receive a free gas coupon in the mail. Each coupon is redeemable at any time in units of 5 gallons by the dealer who sold you the tires. In total, you will receive 20, 30, 40, or 50 gallons of any Esso gas free, depending on the number of Atlas tires you purchased.

SURPRISE! New lower prices on many Atlas tire lines. Esso dealers have actually reduced prices on many Atlas snow tire lines. Just ask for details.
